A WICKED THRUST, AND THE DUEL WAS OVER.

AN AFFAIR OF HONOR BY EMILE BAYARD

A FIERCELY FOUGHT DUEL BETWEEN TWO JEALOUS YOUNG WOMEN WHICH ENDED LIKE THE FAMOUS FICTION STORY OF M. CATULLE MENDES.

PARIS has been intensely excited about a duel between two pretty and popular actresses—Mademoiselle Mimi du Barri and Mademoiselle Renee de la Chapelle.

The most extraordinary thing about the affair is that it ended in exactly the same way as a greatly appreciated little story by Catulle Mendes, called "The Duel."

It appears that Mademoiselle du Barri remarked before a party of friends, principally women, that Mademoiselle de la Chapelle had a figure that resembled a sausage tied round the middle. The remark was, of course, repeated to the latter, and she was furious about it. She went to Mademoiselle du Barri and demanded:

"Is it true, Mademoiselle, that you said I looked like a sausage tied in the middle?"

"Yes, I said it, and I repeat it," said the other defiantly.

Smack! and Mademoiselle de la Chapelle's firm white hand landed smartly on Mademoiselle du Barri's smooth, soft cheek. Friends quickly separated them, but they were so infuriated with each other that each would gladly have inflicted the cruellest conceivable torture on the other. Their friends decided that the provocation given on each side was so aggravating that the insults received could only be wiped out by a duel with deadly weapons.

Seconds were duly appointed, and a challenge given and accepted. No men were consulted. The fair seconds studied the code duello and fitted themselves for their duties thoroughly. They even consulted the famous picture by Emile Bayard, depicting a duel between two women, in order to obtain suggestions as to the proper costumes to be worn on the fatal occasion.

Swords were chosen as the weapons, and a pretty garden attached to a charming little restaurant on the outskirts of the Forest of Fontainebleau was secured as the duelling ground. Here they could conduct the combat safe from interruption, and afterward the seconds and at least one survivor would be sure of obtaining an excellent lunch.

The two principals had some knowledge of fencing, like many women of to-day, and felt themselves qualified to fight a serious duel. They met punctually at 9 o'clock on the appointed morning. Each was attired for the fray in a short skirt, low-heeled shoes and a gauzy, semi-transparent shirt waist, which permitted the seconds to assure themselves that no defensive armor was worn to prevent the cruel sword from entering the soft, warm flesh.

The combatants faced one another with evident anger, and at the word "Go" attacked with great ferocity. After they had felt the clash of the cold steel for a few moments, however, their bloodthirsty ardor began to diminish. They engaged twice and were parted by their seconds in the usual manner, without having inflicted any injury upon one another.

During the third assault Mademoiselle de la Chapelle engaged in carte, and Mademoiselle du Barri slipped under her guard and lunged heavily, moving both feet forward as she did so, which is contrary to the humane

TO PREVENT A FAMINE IN BABIES

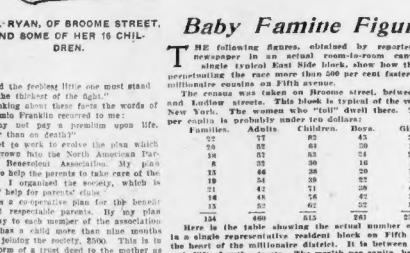
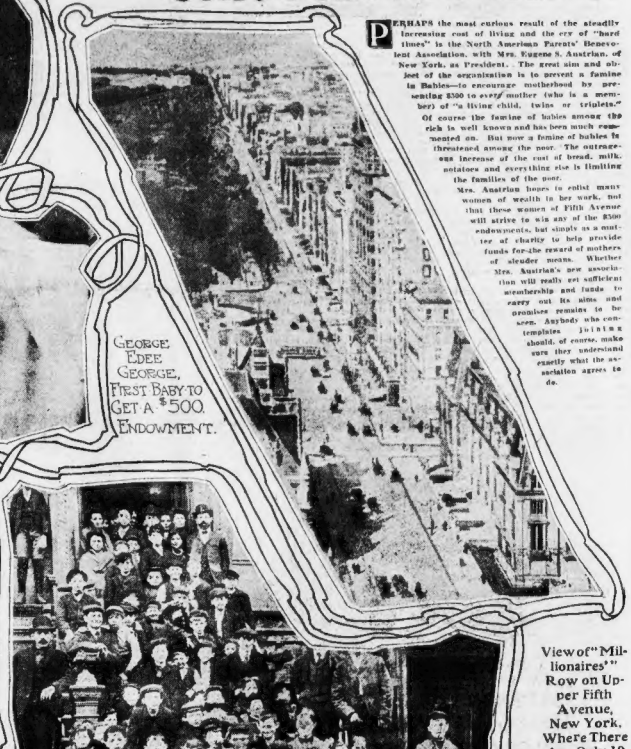
GEORGE EDEE GEORGE, FIRST BABY TO GET A $500 ENDOWMENT.



MRS. RYAN, OF BROOME STREET, AND SOME OF HER 16 CHILDREN.



View of "Millionaires'" Row on Upper Fifth Avenue, New York, Where There Are Only 10 Children to Each Block.

And a View of a Door Step in Broome Street Where There are More Than 500 Children Living on One Block.

By Mrs. Eugene S. Austrian
President of the North American Parents' Benevolent Association.

PERHAPS the most curious result of the steadily increasing cost of living and the cry of "hard times" is the North American Parents' Benevolent Association, with Mrs. Eugene S. Austrian, of New York, as President. The great aim and object of the organization is to prevent a famine in Babies—to encourage motherhood by presenting $500 to every mother (who is a member) of "a living child, twins or triplets."

Of course the famine of babies among the rich is well known and has been much remented on. But now a famine of babies is threatened among the poor. The outrageous increase of the cost of bread, milk, potatoes and everything else is limiting the families of the poor.

Mrs. Austrian hopes to enlist many women of wealth in her work, not that these women of Fifth Avenue will strive to win any of the $500 endowments, but simply as a matter of charity to help provide funds for the reward of mothers of slender means. Whether Mrs. Austrian's new association will really get sufficient membership and funds to carry out its aims and promises remains to be seen. Anybody who contemplates joining should, of course, make sure they understand exactly what the association agrees to do.

THE association has grown out of one of the greatest needs of the time.

Next to France, America is leading in the regrettable race of dissolution. At the present ratio of childless marriages the United States would cease to be a nation after a few centuries. When we first grasp the idea that motherhood has become unfashionable in America we are shocked and cry out indignantly against heartless women, and that cry is justified if directed against our so-called "best families." So small are these "best families" becoming that in a few generations there will be no families, merely mated pairs, only temporarily united.

That is the trend of that which we thoughtlessly call the "best society." Yet that it is, by its own selfishness, stinging about its own extinction is really a benefit to the broader and better society. A glance at the younger generation of the "leading families" shows them to have the signs of race deterioration. Their heads are small. Their movements are languid. Their speech is lackadaisical. Like cattle, they reveal the physical marks of being inbred. Their parents have international and reuternarried until the "best families" are running out.

So while it cannot be denied that along Millionaires' Row, that mile of glittering desolation, there is an average of but less than one child, in each of the splendid homes, the fact is one to make us hope, not despair. We want the people of the United States to be of a sturdier race.

But among those to whom we should look for a better race we find the obstacle of poverty. During the past two years the cost of provisions and household goods has gone up from twenty to twenty-four per cent. It costs from a fifth to a fourth more to live today than it did in November, 1905. Yet there has been no corresponding increase in wages. The problem of how to feed and clothe and pay possible doctor bills for a new member of the family is a grave one. Parents dread to bring a little one into the world to face want and wretchedness. So in the poor, as in the rich circles, and for the only acceptable reason families have been growing smaller, and the married women with no hope nor wish for a child is becoming everywhere a common sight.

Adelaide Procter had poverty in view when she wrote:

"And the feebler little one must stand
In the thickest of the fight."

Thinking about these facts the words of Benjamin Franklin recurred to me:

"Why not pay a premium upon life, rather than on death?"

I set to work to evolve the plan which has grown into the North American Parents' Benevolent Association. My plan was to help the parents to take care of the child. I organized the society, which is a self help for parents' clubs.

It is a co-operative plan for the benefit of all respectable parents. By my plan we pay to each member of the association who has a child more than nine months after joining the society, $500. This is in the form of a trust deed to the mother as guardian of the child. We first tried making the parents joint trustees, but bad fathers abused the trust. Now we permit only the mother to receive or disburse the money. It is the mother's right to use the money according to her discretion for the child's welfare. This, we think, was a wise decision, for a child can have no better, more unselfish friend than its mother.

The rich as well as the poor are joining the association. When automobiles from Fifth avenue began to stop before my door, and mistresses of the mansions on Millionaires' Row to visit me and ask to join the association, I was amazed. But they did not leave me long in doubt. The five hundred was not for themselves. They had no wish to have babies, but they joined the association for the benefit of their servants and their poor relations, to whom children days after its birth. were a blessing and luxury. On my books are many names of rich, childless wives of who have a whim for this sort of charity.

As rich and poor alike became more and more interested in my plan I had no quiet nor privacy in my house. I opened an office at No. 1267 Broadway, and spent a couple of hours a day there. I engaged office assistants and advisers, and so crowded has the office become that I shall soon have to take another and larger one.

It is very gratifying to me to find that the love of children is not dying out of the human heart. People desire children as much as they ever did. It is only the cruel conditions of poverty and hard times that have caused the appalling lowering of the birth rate.

My husband's friends, financiers known throughout the country for their wisdom, told me that the association could not be made self-supporting. I argued that it could, if enrolled a great, staggering row of figures that amazed them. These statistics proved that only sixteen per cent of women become mothers. Now, assuming that only sixteen per cent of our members have children, the remaining eighty-four per cent, by their dues and fees, provide the premium. Each member pays a membership fee of $5 a year. After having been in the society six months she pays annual dues of $2. The monthly assessments are never more than $3, and never less than $1, according to the length of time they have been members.

So every child born to a member of the Association receives its $500 in gold thirty

Baby Famine Figures:

THE following figures, obtained by reporters of this newspaper in an actual room-to-room canvass of a single typical East Side block, show how the poor are perpetuating the race more than 500 per cent faster than their millionaire cousins on Fifth avenue.

The census was taken on Broome street, between Orchard and Ludlow streets. This block is typical of the very poor of New York. The women who "toil" dwell there. The wealth per capita is probably under ten dollars:

Families.	Adults.	Children.	Boys.	Girls.
20	55	61	29	34
18	51	53	24	29
8	25	30	16	14
15	46	38	20	18
19	54	39	22	17
21	42	71	28	43
16	48	56	42	14
15	52	62	32	30
154	450	515	261	254

Here is the table showing the actual number of offspring in a single representative resident block on Fifth avenue, in the heart of the millionaire district. It is between Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth streets. The wealth per capita here is probably ten millions:

The mother, relieved of the worry about how the little one shall be warmed and clothed and sheltered, has been cheerful and transmitted her good cheer and confidence to the little one. So all the association babies come into the world with the birthday gift of a sunny disposition.

Most of the mothers have used our hundred dollars or a little more for baby's wants when it is ushered into the world. That almost pays the physician's fee and for the baby's layette. Some parents use more of it. A Jersey man told us when he accompanied his wife to my office that they had three children and she had announced her determination to have three more. He said that the advent of each of their little ones had cost two hundred dollars, therefore 12 his wife joined the society they would be the gainers by three hundred dollars for each little one who might bless them. I reminded him that, since he seemed to be in comfortable circumstances, it might be still wiser to put aside the $500 as a dowry for the baby if it should be a girl, or to give the child, if it were a boy, a start in business. The $500, I reminded him, would amount, with the accrued interest, to $1,100 on the child's twenty-first birthday.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore approved of my plan. Many women connected with the Mothers' Congress indorsed it. Rich poor joined the society, but I never find that it was an unqualified success until the birth of little George Edee George, of No. 201 East Sixty-first street. He was a bright-faced, beautiful baby, reflecting all the radiance of his mother's care-free mind before his birth.

Every one of the members of the association signs the constitution and bylaws and subscribes to the aims of the society, which are:

First. The mutual improvement of conditions and circumstances attendant upon or in connection with childbirth.

Second. To create a greater regard for the needs and requirements of mothers and children at critical periods and especially to assist mothers and children generally, financially or otherwise at the time of a childbirth in the family, and by proper or suitable methods to provide a fund or funds for such financial assistance as the bylaws of its membership, and in general to lift up the downtrodden, to heal the sick, to instruct the ignorant, to use its influence to lift up and assist each other to attain to a higher plane of life, and to be rewarded as hereit provided by the bylaws of its membership, and in general a fuller realization of its duties toward children.

I hope to make true association a national institution. By it rich women may help the poor and the poor may help themselves and all may help posterity.

A Wicked Thrust; and the Duel Was Over.

rules enforced in ordinary Parisian duels. The slim, deadly weapon passed through the diaphanous material of Mademoiselle de la Chapelle's shirt waist, and she shrieked as she felt the cold steel press against her skin.

At the very moment when she [illegible] her opponent shriek with pain Mademoiselle du Barri saw, as she believed, a ruddy spot upon the left side of enemy's bosom, near the heart and [illegible] the place where the sword had entered. Mademoiselle du Barri dropped her sword and recoiled with horror as she realized that she had taken the life of her former friend. All her enmity vanished, and all the witnesses rushed to the assistance of Mademoiselle de la Chapelle, [illegible] fainting to the ground. Every one was certain that she had been terribly wounded, perhaps stricken to the heart.

And then, strange to say, examination failed to reveal the slightest scratch or injury upon the comely person of the fainting duelist. The only thing which could have given ground for the belief that she was wounded was a pinkish but perfectly natural spot not far from her left shoulder. It was this which caught Mademoiselle du Barri's eye and caused her to think that [illegible] had slain her friend, while Mademoiselle Chapelle, feeling the cold steel [illegible] that she was really wounded, and [illegible] that no blood had been [illegible] joy to everybody concerned. Feeling was horrified, and [illegible] terrible encounter grim-visaged witnesses enjoyed a

Can Cupid Square this Circle?

How the Failure of Plans to Marry Margaretta Drexel to Lord Brooke Revealed This Endless Chain of Blighted Romances—

Lord Brooke Still Loves Miss Jean Reid; Miss Reid Can See Only Winston Churchill; Winston Churchill is Gladys Deacon's Captive; Miss Deacon Fancies Lord Brooke.

WHY does not little Margaretta Drexel, prize debutante beauty of the latest London season, hold court this Autumn at Warwick Castle?

The cables have told how anxious the Anthony Drexels, Margaretta's socially powerful and immensely wealthy parents, were to rent from the Countess of Warwick that splendid historic country place.

Everybody in Anglo-American society knows Lady Warwick's need of ready money. Few entertained any doubt that she would be glad to see little Margaretta installed at Warwick Castle permanently, as the wife of her son, Lord Brooke. Such an alliance would solve all the financial difficulties that beset the Countess and worry the heir, and after the brilliant debut of little Margaretta it seemed that there was not an eligible peer in England who would not gladly lay his title at her feet.

But behold! The Anthony Drexels do not get possession of Warwick Castle, and the Countess does come to America for the sole purpose of bettering her finances by interesting American capitalists in her South African enterprises.

Why, why, why?

The answer probes right down into the heart of the choicest social circle in England, involving primarily three maids and a man, and, secondarily, two more men. Really it is most serious situation, for, incidental to the whole complication has come about the divorce of the Duke of Marlborough from his beautiful multi-millionaire American duchess.

Think of little, convent-bred Margaretta Drexel, whose religious ideals almost held her back from ever seeing more of the great world than is visible from cloister windows, being so promptly drawn into such a web of worldly cross purposes.

To be able to untangle this web at all you need a chart to work from, a summary of the situation.

First, the Anthony Drexels failed to secure Warwick Castle for the hunting season because of a misapprehension. The social world, including the most agreeable Countess and the quite willing Drexels, would expect a result in the shape of an engagement between little Margaretta and Lord Brooke, heir to the estate.

Lo! at the eleventh hour Lord Brooke appears astonishingly indifferent about little Margaretta. Incredible. Why, oh why is this? Well, after a lapse of nearly ten years, Lord Brooke is still in love with Miss Jean Reid, daughter of the American Ambassador.

But the American Ambassador is very wealthy also, and Jean Reid is his heiress and a beauty. Why was not the Countess of Warwick satisfied with such an arrangement?

She would have been, but, alas, Miss Reid discovered that she did not love Lord Brooke. She preferred to him Winston Churchill, the rising young British statesman, son of Lady Randolph Churchill.

So here is the bare skeleton of the chart, explaining the failure of the Anthony Drexels and the Countess of Warwick to realize their mutual hopes. But when it is further developed, how the plot thickens!—the plot created by Fate.

Never before did Fate clothe herself in such charming curves and tints, for she stands revealed as Miss Gladys Deacon. Because of this charmer of heirs to imperial thrones, and most other youths whom opportunity favors, Winston Churchill had no eyes nor ears for Miss Reid.

And this is not a procession of infatuations and blighted hopes, but rather a circle of them, for while Winston Churchill's eyes were all for Gladys Deacon, hers were fixed upon Lord Brooke, who could see neither her nor little Margaretta Drexel because he could see only Miss Jean Reid despite the fact that she couldn't see him at all.

Geometrically the circle is a very perfect and satisfying figure, but in this instance it turns out pretty nearly a tragedy. If Lord Brooke could only fix his whole attention upon little Margaretta, probably the whole problem would solve itself.

There was a time when, left to himself, Miss Gladys Deacon might have saved all this worry; but the Countess of Warwick could not reconcile herself to that dark page in the Deacon family past—the father an insane homicide, though perhaps mistakenly, on his wife's account.

Yet, despite this handicap, Gladys Deacon remains the central figure in the drama. Because of her, loved by two men, two maids who love one man each are disconsolate.

Only the Marlborough affair seems to have—perhaps only temporarily—limited her potentiality. This is a side issue in the complication, but it shows what a powerful rival any girl can have when Miss Gladys is on the scene and interested.

Her extraordinary beauty and irresistible personal charm have set her apart from, and in many respects above, all other girls of recognized social position in America and in Europe. As though in recognition of her own unique assemblage of physical perfections, she quickly made herself past mistress of every artificial aid to beauty.

For her own adornment she knows more about millinery than the milliners; more about gowns than the dressmakers; more about manners and deportment as applicable to her own particular personality than even the great Turveydrop. She has trained her mind in whatever is the mode, and is polished in a list of polite accomplishments the acquiring of which would appal the average society girl.

For Miss Gladys Deacon it was the simplest and easiest thing to make a conquest of British high society. Unlike girls of smaller mental endowment, she could win to her interest women as well as men.

It was in 1903—not long after the tragic scandal in the Deacon family that convulsed Paris—that Mrs. Deacon, herself still a beautiful woman, took her two convent bred daughters to London, engaging a house in Mayfair for the season. The beauty and distinguished manners of the daughters made an immediate impression. At a big party given by Lady Warwick, Gladys leaped into extraordinary vogue as the beauty of the season.

Young Lord Brooke—who had run away from school clear to South Africa to fight in the Boer War and returned covered with glory—threw himself at her feet. So many other men did the same thing that the soldier boy heir to Warwick Castle was not especially noticed in the contest for the heart and hand of Miss Gladys.

What was more important—and ultimately more serious—was the fact that Miss Gladys was promptly taken up and "starred" by pretty nearly all the Duchesses in England. The Duchess of Fort and was her enthusiastic champion; the Duchess of Westminster doted on her; the Duchess of Sutherland couldn't get along without her presence at important functions.

But it was fated that the American Duchess of Marlborough should fall deepest under the brilliant young girl's spell. They became the most intimate of friends. The Duchess carried her off to Blenheim Castle, and for quite a period thereafter the distinguished Duke and Duchess. In fact, he only tore himself away in response to the imperative order of his Emperor-father.

Even after this forcible separation it required all the Kaiser's diplomacy plus his paternal strong right arm to lead his heir away from lovesick dreams of Miss Gladys to serious preparation for his career as future ruler of the German Empire.

Miss Gladys continued to spend much of her time at Blenheim when in England. With her mother and sister she became at different seasons of the year the lodestone which drew distinguished suitors to Paris, to Nice, to Rome, to Berlin, to St. Petersburg. But in England the lot of these cavaliers was sad who were not on the good books of the Duchess of Marlborough.

In the meantime Lord Brooke had transferred his affections and ambitions to Miss Jean Reid. It had been borne in upon him that even if he had succeeded in impressing Miss Deacon, his mother, Lady Warwick, was one of those mothers who could not reconcile herself to associations through marriage with the Deacon family past. The absolute innocence of Miss Gladys, and even of her mother, could not alter the case.

Thus the history of the fateful Miss Gladys is brought down to the first mysterious evidences of strained relations between the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough. It came to be noticed, too, that the Duchess of Marlborough was indulging much less than formerly in the society of Miss Deacon. Instead she seemed to be making a close friend of Mrs. George Cornwallis West.

The early reports of the separation of the Marlboroughs was associated with rumors that the Duchess and Miss Deacon were no longer friends, that the latter would not again be seen at Blenheim. Of course, the Duke had been attentive to the brilliant girl, who was his wife's guest. Was she a flirt? Was she a designing creature against whom the Duchess did well to arm herself?

That question was forgotten, though, for more attentive to Miss Gladys, apparently, than Marlborough ever had been, was the eligible Duke of Norfolk. He was twenty-seven years her senior in age, but next to that of the royal family his social position was the greatest in England.

Miss Gladys was announced as guest of honor at Arundel Castle. The Duke of Norfolk was a widower, with an heir forever prohibited by mental and physical disorders from succeeding to his father's proud position. Evidently the Duke was deeply in love with Miss Deacon. Given her consent, there was no reason in the world why she should not marry him. Presto! Reports of the engagement were cabled over all lands and under all oceans.

But the Duke of Norfolk was to marry otherwise. The Marlboroughs have definitely separated. Miss Gladys appears to entertain no ducal aspirations. Winston Churchill would seem to be the likeliest fate of this fateful beauty, the glamour of whose charms is directly and indirectly responsible for the non-fruition of the hopes of Lord Brooke, of Miss Jean Reid and possibly of little Margaretta Drexel.

As it is not positively known that Miss Margaretta's heart is fixed upon Lord Brooke, her extreme youth and inexperience, and her probable horrid-free condition should eliminate her as a real element in this tangled romance.

Can it be expected that Winston Churchill, while his heart retains its shadow of hope, will look upon any fair face but that of Gladys Deacon, queen of modern charmers? Will not Miss Jean Reid become again, as she did at Ophir Hall, Westchester County, New York, a pleased listener to the love signs of Lord Brooke? How far such a decision would go toward breaking up this circle of blighted hopes!

It was only a little more than four years ago that Lord Brooke, his South African war laurels fresh on his brow, came to this country on a hunting trip. Just as he was starting West in search of big game young Waldorf Astor, who happened to be over here, introduced him to the Whitelaw Reids. A week-end party at Ophir Hall gave him his first opportunity of meeting Miss Jean—who was then just barely a debutante.

With all his war honors upon him, the young man had the reputation of being a bit blase with respect to the fair sex. Perhaps he had shown something of that disposition, and perhaps little Miss Jean punished him for it.

On his part, however, it was observed that Cupid was hard at w[illegible] During the week-end Lord Brooke ha[illegible]ces of Miss Jean Reid. He[illegible] interest in hunting, and[illegible]panions had fairly to du[illegible] the West.

If Miss Reid still punishing him for having presumed to ignore the existence of her sex? All accounts agree that he still loves her—loves her no much that he alone, of most of the great matches in Europe, is indifferent to the transcendent charms and many other advantages represented by little Margaretta Drexel.

So at present there seems no way of shattering this circle of I-love-you-but-you-love-another victims of unrequited passion. Is Cupid enough of a mathematician to square this circle?

"There seems no way of shattering this circle of, I—love—you —but—you—love—another, victims of unrequited passion."

HOW TO MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR HUSBAND.

MOST husbands feel competent to give good advice to wives, and there are few wives who doubt their ability to instruct husbands in their duty; but it was a bachelor clergyman, after nearly fifty years of marrying and christening the inhabitants of one New England village, who formulated these precepts for the guidance of brides:

When you marry him, love him.
After you marry him, study him.
If he is honest, honor him.
If he is generous, appreciate him.
When he is sad, cheer him.
When he is cross, amuse him.
When he is talkative, listen to him.
When he is quarrelsome, ignore him.
If he is slothful, spur him.
If he is noble, praise him.
If he is confidential, encourage him.
If he is secretive, trust him.
If he is jealous, cure him.
If he cares naught for pleasure, coax him.
If he favors society, accompany him.
If he does you a favor, thank him.
When he deserves it, kiss him.
Let him think how well you understand him; but never let him know that you study him.

WIVES WANTED AT ONCE! READ THIS!

A GROUP OF MEMBERS OF THE BACHELORS' CLUB WHO WANT WIVES

THE BACHELORS' CLUB of RANDLETT, OKLAHOMA, INVITES YOUNG WOMEN WHO WANT A HUSBAND AND A RANCH TO SEND NAMES AND PICTURES—and they will do the rest

ORA BILLINGSLEY & FREEMAN C. MILLER, two leading members.

MARGARET ANGLIN as a RANCH GIRL

THE great West is rich in land and cattle and health and sturdy men—but women are scarce. Especially in the new ranch lands where the pioneers have just broken the soil, women are indeed few. The appeal printed on this page from the Bachelors' Club of Randlett, Oklahoma, ought to awaken a hopeful thrill in the hearts of the worthy young women of the East who are eager to become dutiful wives and mothers.

Randlett, Oklahoma, Nov. 11.

To the Editor of the Hearst Newspapers:

WE are lonesome and we want the happiness of a wife and (if God pleases) a family. We are honest, earnest and able to support a comfortable home. Oklahoma is one of the garden spots of the world, and we, the pioneers of Randlett, Okla., have formed a Bachelors' Club to let the worthy young women of the Eastern and Western and Southern States know that husbands are eagerly waiting for them out here. Your great newspapers go everywhere and we lay our case before you.

We see by the papers that the theatres in the East run plays of Western ranch life and that these plays are popular. If Eastern girls like to see scenes of ranch life on the stage we are sure they would like to live the real, actual free and healthful life of the ranch. We have here in the Bachelors' Club a photograph of Margaret Anglin, who played a ranch girl in a drama called "The Great Divide." If Miss Anglin or any other Eastern girls would like to play the ranch girl part in real life on our Oklahoma ranches—let them write us and be sure to enclose their photographs.

The young men of Randlett—all of us—are hustlers, alive to the opportunities of this great and beautiful land, and making homes and comfortable fortunes for ourselves and the wives we hope soon to have to share our prosperity.

The Eastern States have more young women than they know what to do with, and we want some of them to come out West and share our homes and our hearts. We read in the magazines and newspapers that there are so many young single women in the East and the Middle West that they are crowding young men out of the offices and stores, and making it almost impossible for a young man to get wages that will warrant him marrying and starting in to support a wife and a home.

The very first day the club was organized more than fifty men signed the charter membership list, and every one of the fifty is well able to take good care of any girl who will become his wife and rest in her lot in this great Western country.

Everything was done systematically. A committee was appointed to draft by-laws and a constitution, and the club voted unanimously that no man whose integrity could be in any way questioned should be allowed to become a member. This means that every member of the club is as a way a sort of guarantee for the good behavior of every other member, and any young woman who becomes the bride of a member of the Bachelor Club of Randlett will have the influence of all the leading young men of the community to aid her husband, not only in making his way in the business world, but to see that he keeps sober, and does everything possible to make her happy and work for the progress of the community.

The man who comes into a new country and carves his own way to success is the sort of a man who makes a mighty good husband. Many of them could be in the large cities drawing big salaries and working for somebody else ten hours a day. But they prefer to work for themselves and build up their own fortunes in the new land so they can be independent.

They are working for themselves, and in some instances for the girl they have not yet met, but hope soon to meet.

There is hard work here and plenty of it, but our young men are not afraid. They know that a few years will see them independently well to do, and old age will find them possessed of happy homes and so situated they can enjoy the declining years of life in peace and plenty.

And they only find the beauties of Oklahoma marred by one thing.

There are no girls.

The settlers who came from Iowa, Indiana and Ohio have brought their wives and children, and there are good schools for the youngsters, but there are very few daughters of twenty or twenty-five, and whenever the sister-in-law of some young farmer has come here to visit her sister she has been promptly snapped up and married. The pick of the young men of Oklahoma is at the choice of any nice girl who wants a husband and is willing to wait a few years for the luxuries of the East. Come West, girls.

We will give you comfort to begin with, and luxuries within the next two years. There are good stores, good houses, and good schools. You can have the finest apples, melons, peaches, and all the northern fruits and vegetables, grown in your own gardens, and fresh game and trout whenever you tire of beefsteak, roast beef, fresh lamb or roast pork.

You will not have to live in stuffy little city flats, or in brick houses that stand like rows of boxes in groups of thousands. The electric lines will soon reach every main highway, and the telephone will connect every house in the State with the towns.

We young men of the Bachelors' Club of Randlett are going to have the best town in the best State in the best country in the world before we have been here many years, and we want some of the brightest, nicest girls of the East and South to be our wives and help us to build up a community to be proud of.

This is a young woman's State as well as a young man's.

There isn't a saloon in the State. We closed the last of them on the first of this month. We are a clean, sober, honest, hard-working people, and we want the right kind of wives to make the best homes in the world. This is the land of progress, and here is an opportunity for ambitious young ladies to help it progress and benefit by every step it advances.

The Bachelors' Club of Randlett, Oklahoma, extends its greetings to the bachelor girls of the crowded old States, and invites them to send along their pictures and tell the truth about themselves.

Oklahoma and the Bachelors' Club need them. Nice girls who want honest husbands should write to me, and I will put them in communication with the most suitable members of the club, and time will do the rest.

To begin with, the climate is so evenly balanced that the trying extremes of the long Winters of the North and the terribly Hot, depressing Summers of the South are entirely unknown. The average annual temperature right here at Randlett is 58½ degrees above zero. Just think of that, only two degrees lower than the temperature of Los Angeles, the land of perpetual flowers, and one degree lower than that of Sacramento, the garden spot of Central California.

Then, too, the country is very beautiful, and there is no finer scenery anywhere in the United States. Great hills rear their tops up to the clouds and deep valleys spread out like huge panoramas for miles and miles between the peaks. Romantic rivers wind in and out among the forests and slowly sweep through the long grassy valleys. There are no sudden storms, no dreadful hurricanes, no quick changes of temperature, and no insect pests to destroy the crops. The land is suited to raise almost anything, from cotton to wheat. There is plenty of water, and the cost of irrigation does not have to be met, as it does in the California valleys, where water must often be brought from long distances to moisten the parched earth before it will bear crops. Apples grow to great size and of uniformly good quality and color. An apple orchard eight years old will bear as much here as an orchard of twice that age in the apple districts of Ohio and New York.

The girl who gets a Randlett husband has no need to fear being lonely. Settlers here have not been allowed to take up thousands of acres under one title, and there are no vast tracts of land reserved for cattle or sheep to graze upon. The farming lands are divided into sections, each one mile square, which contain six hundred and forty acres. Each section is divided into quarter sections of a hundred and sixty acres, and no one settler may take up more than a quarter section.

So, even in the purely farming districts, perhaps thirty or forty miles away from a town, there are neighbors within half a mile at most. In fact, there is a tendency to group together, so that the homes of all the farmers on four whole sections will form a little village. That is the reason that on every hand you will see school houses and groups of laughing children playing about them. The new State has given more than two million acres of land in perpetuity to the schools, the agricultural college and the State university. These lands are rented to farmers who hope to make enough during the term of their leases to buy farms of their own, and the school lands are thus paying already an income of $2,500,000 a year for the support of schools. The school commissioner at Guthrie is leasing these school farms at a great rate, and plenty of good schools are assured by this method.

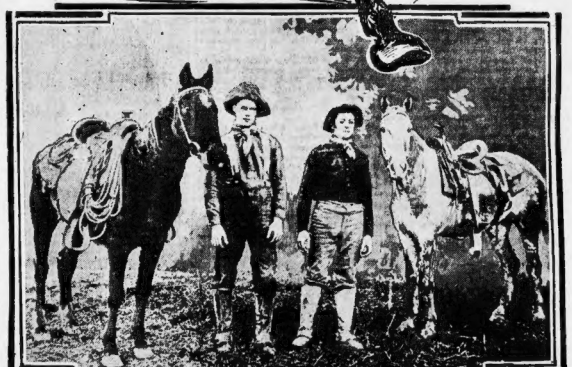
Besides farming is already accomplishing wonders for Oklahoma. One farmer made $700 out of ten acres of potatoes. Two railroad conductors rented a hundred acres, and their potato crop cleared just $15,000. An eight-acre chicken farm paid $1,000 the first year. An eighty-acre orchard sold $8,000 worth of apples this Fall. So the Eastern girl need not be afraid of starvation in Oklahoma.

The American nation owes a debt of gratitude to Oklahoma Payne for his determined and continuous battle to have this fruitful territory opened up to settlement by its people. In 1889, a year after Oklahoma was first opened to settlement, the population was 60,000. To-day there are a million and a half. And listen, girls—in 1900 the census showed 90,483 families owning their own homes, free from mortgage, which puts Oklahoma ahead of any other State in this respect.

In 1905 there were 142,750 farms, and the crops for the year were valued by the State Board of Agriculture at $90,052,088.

We don't want to go into too many figures, but the sort of girls we want for wives will be interested in knowing what Oklahoma has accomplished in her few years of existence. Add to this that we have 1,682 towns big enough to be marked on the map, and you will see what we have done by way of foundation. In seventeen years the home of the jackrabbit and the coyote has become a land of farms, dotted with towns and gridironed with railroads. All we need is the right sort of wives for our young men, and we shall make this the greatest State in the Union. Yours sincerely,

ROBERT JOHNSON,
Secretary Bachelors' Club,
Randlett, Oklahoma.



TWO RANDLETT BACHELORS WHO HAVE HOMES ALL READY FOR THE WIVES THEY ARE ANXIOUS TO GET.

"The Bachelors' Club of Randlett, Oklahoma, extends its greetings to the bachelor girls of the crowded old States, and invites them to send along their pictures and tell the truth about themselves."

"Oklahoma and the Bachelors' Club needs them. Nice girls who want honest husbands should write to me, and I will put them in communication with the most suitable members of the club, and time will do the rest."

She Caught the Young Duke of Westminster in a Trap, Squeezed him for $250,000 to Hush Up the Scandal, and Now Is Hot on the Trail of the Hon. Yarde-Buller for $100,000, and Not Even King Edward Can Stop Her.

THE FASCINATING MRS. ATHERTON.

THE AWFUL MESS THE FASCINATING MRS. ATHERTON HAS MADE.

ALREADY boiling and bubbling and sending its noxious fumes into decent and indecent nostrils alike, England's most wretched scandal of a double decade is about to become public in all its nauseous details.

This is because one of the worst, most vindictive women of modern times happens also to be rich, gently born and superlatively fascinating. Therefore she is able to drag into the English courts the awful mess of her own concocting, and not even King Edward can stop her.

She is the notorious divorced Mrs. Atherton, who, during the progress of the Boer War, made the Cape Town residence of her husband, Colonel Thomas James Atherton, himself included during his absence at the front, the jest of the whole army and the gossip of the court circle at home.

There the young Duke of Westminster, though a dozen years her junior, fell victim to her charms. That he succeeded in wrenching himself free from her greedy clutch was due to King Edward's peremptory summons to come home and fulfil his engagement to marry the present duchess, then pretty Shelagh Cornwallis-West. But even the King could not prevent the fascinating lady from collecting $250,000 from the Duke as her price for peace.

Yet never for a moment did she cease drawing rich and impressionable young officers of the British army in South Africa into the net she kept spread and baited with her own fair self in her husband's house. Gallant young Captain John Reginald Yarde-Buller, son and heir of Lord Churston, nibbled at the bait and was captured.

The army laughed louder than ever, tauntingly and derisively that the screens of it reached England, and not even the dishonored husband at the front, fighting the Boers, could longer remain blind.

But he was generous. He named only young Yarde-Buller as co-respondent in his divorce action. That, however, was ample. The evidence was brief and conclusive, and there was no defence.

Many would think that a lady of gentle birth and breeding would now have been glad to settle down and live quietly and luxuriously upon the spoils wrung from the young Duke of Westminster. But that would display gross ignorance of Mrs. Atherton's character.

What she did was to follow Yarde-Buller to England, as she had followed the Duke of Westminster, and when she found that he had secretly married himself to a captivating young actress, Miss Denise Orme, to create scenes and finally bring against Lord Churston's happily married heir suit for breach of promise of marriage, demanding damages in the sum of $100,000.

Now observe that certainties of public scandal this action invoked. To gain some protection for himself and his cherished domestic firesides, Captain Yarde-Buller must so fortify himself before the law as to be able to say to Mrs. Atherton:

"Your cause fails to the ground because you are beyond the pale. You are an experienced and shameless siren. You were married to Mr. Atherton at such and such a date; I met you, and already numbered your victims by the score. Thus I accuse, and this brace the Duke of Westminster is my witness."

But it is only in open court that the equivalent of such words can be uttered. Therefore, fell in the white light of publicity proceeding all quarters of the globe, the Duke of Westminster, the married to his boyhood's sweetheart, the father of two charming children, must stand forth as one of the earlier victims of that arch siren spiegot Mrs. Atherton.

What a fearful, what a devasting scandal! Why does not King Edward stop it? Magna Charta, equal rights before the bar of justice—that is the answer. Why, Captain Yarde-Buller might easily have made the King himself his witness, since it was King Edward who negotiated the Duke of Westminster's escape.

What a pale day among the fashionables of London that will be when the Duke of Westminster takes the stand to save this either young husband by publicly swearing to all the details of his own period of slavery to Mrs. Atherton!

That slavery even antedates his successful to the richest dukedom in England. He was then Lord Belgrave. He would not come of age until March, 1900, but three years earlier his boyhood friendship with pretty little Shelagh Wear had ripened into mutual love.

Although this little beauty was sister to the Princess of Pless, and of Lady Ivor Churchill's new husband, she so the Duke, Lord Belgrave's grandfather, ostensibly opposed the match. He aspired to a royal marriage, like that of the Duke of Fife. So he sent his heir to South Africa to cure him of his "infatuation."

There young Lord Belgrave visited at the home of Colonel Thomas James Atherton and met his wife, a daughter of Sir Edward Dean Paul. Colonel Atherton, a distinguished officer of the Twelfth Lancers, went to the front leaving his wife in Cape Town, easily the most beautiful and fascinating woman in the government house set.

It was not long noticed that Lord Belgrave was now favored by Cape Town's reigning beauty than the other young sters who surrounded her. As aide-de-camp to Sir Alfred Milner the youngster had many of opportunities to enjoy the society of Mrs. Atherton. Possibly she considered his prospects too remote to be worth her while.

But that handicap suddenly vanished. The old duke died and his heir was summoned to England to assume the title and estates.

Had Shelagh Wear heard of his attentions to Mrs. Atherton? Possibly, for when he went to Ruthven Castle to press his suit, he found her cold and distant. It was said that she had fallen in love with Mr. Wood, a well-known London society man without fortune or family. Mrs. Cornwallis-West was deeply disappointed, but Shelagh remained obstinate.

The young duke hastened back to Cape Town to try and forget his love-disappointment. He found Mrs. Atherton all warmth and graciousness. Was he not now the richest peer in England? She spread her snares to capture him.

She was an experienced woman of the world who, to rare personal charm, added extraordinary skill in the art of fascination. He was—well, what most lads are at one-and-twenty.

He had a sweetheart at home, Miss Shelagh Cornwallis-West, who now, it was known, had patched up her quarrel with the young duke, and they were engaged.

Mrs. Atherton knew of the engagement. She broke with all her other admirers and devoted herself exclusively to the young duke.

Meanwhile Shelagh at home was having a bad time of it, for, of course, there were kind friends who told her all about the duke's entanglement with Mrs. Atherton. She declared she would never speak to him again, and as for ever marrying him, that was impossible. He had broken her heart, and she would never marry anybody.

Her mother took a different view of the matter. Duked, especially rich dukes, were not to be picked up every day. She set herself to spoil Mrs. Atherton's game.

THE DUCHESS OF WESTMINSTER, FORMERLY MISS SHELAGH CORNWALLIS-WEST.

MRS. YARDE-BULLER, WHO WAS DENISE ORME.

THE DUKE OF WESTMINSTER.

Her first move was to seek an interview with the King, who at that time was still Prince of Wales. As a result, the duke was summoned from South Africa. The prince talked to him as an elderly man of the world, wise and kindly. The gist of what he told the duke was that he should break with Mrs. Atherton, pay her whatever price she demanded to keep quiet, and marry Shelagh speedily. To the unhappy duke this course promised much and undeserved happiness, and he agreed to wed Shelagh—if she would have him—in three weeks.

The next thing to be accomplished was the "quarring" of Mrs. Atherton. She had entrusted all this perilous work to Sir Edward Dean Paul, her father, who followed the duke home in the next ship and called in London, and the details of solicitors for the settlement of any ques- refused to see her and referred her to his tion of damages she might raise. humiliation for the nation.

She saw the solicitors and assessed her That Mrs. Atherton is a dangerous and damages at $250,000. The money was paid recklessly determined woman—of a type her without a quibble, a fact which afterward caused her bitterly to regret that she had not asked for more. The marriage between Shelagh and the duke took place within the stipulated three weeks and was the great society event of the season.

Mrs. Atherton, fascinating as ever, soon had hosts of admirers. At last Yarde-Buller came her way. Col. Atherton soon became the laughing stock of his friends and acquaintances. They began to speak of him as "shady," and to blut that he was partaking of his wife's spoils. The divorces followed, as above described.

Unfortunately for the Duke of Westminster, he is Yarde-Buller's trump card in the game that is to be played in the law courts. His story is to be wrung from him to prove that Mrs. Atherton is a sordid adventuress and not entitled to one damages at all. It is rather hard on the duke that, after paying $250,000 to get the scandal hushed up, he should be forced to make it public himself.

The story, however, will not really do him much damage now. He has been a good husband. He and Shelagh have been very happy since their marriage, and have two lovely children, a boy and a girl.

But how will Mrs. Atherton come out of it? There are still other pieces of misprince talked to him as an elderly man of chief laid at her door which proved very annoying to the British nation. It was that same party of young lieutenants who were responsible for the most aggravating piece of "ragging" in the history of the British Army.

The unfortunate victim was a newspaper correspondent named Binsford. The pranksters of this ragging were court-married in London, and the details of shown by a certain scene which she made volume called "Female Offenders"—was after following Captain Yarde-Buller home to London from Cape Town.

Soon after the Atherton divorce in which he had figured as co-respondent, Captain Yarde-Buller had secretly married the charming actress, Miss Denise Orme. Evidently he feared trouble from the siren, for his secret was well kept.

Captain Yarde-Buller had established himself in a flat in West Kensington. He had ignored sundry peremptory summonses from Mrs. Atherton to call upon her. So one evening she called at his flat. The maid said the captain was away.

Mrs. Atherton declared that she would not stir till the captain returned. She was as good as her word, and when the captain brought his young wife home from the theatre he was confronted by such a spectacle of "a woman scorned" as very nearly brought the police down upon the uproar.

For a while the reckless conduct of Mrs. Atherton was ascribed to her grief over the tragic death, some years ago, of her only child, a boy, whom she idolized. Now, however, the reflection that other mothers have borne such grief with patient dignity, and the suspicion that greed for money is the real motive which actuates this siren, have caused her to be "cut" by all her former friends.

How she will fare in the forthcoming trial is the occasion of an amount of curiosity that is certain to grave the unpleasant scandal with the presence of the cream of London fashion.

Wives and Their Wisdom.

A MAN'S wife often knows more than he knows about a great many things, and while he need not lower himself in her estimation by admitting her mental superiority, it is sometimes well for him to silently recognize her superior intelligence and profit by it. If he be a wise man he will not be too ready to come into accord with the opinions of his wife, but will affect a great deal of wisdom of his own, even though he knows he has none.

It never increases a wife's respect for her husband to know that he is her inferior in anything; and it certainly does not increase her respect or affection to have him intimate by word or look that she does not know anything at all.

The judgment of the average woman, regarding the disbursement of money is often better than that of the average man. It is often better when it comes to spending money for domestic purposes.

It takes a shrewd shopkeeper or marketman to get ahead of the average woman, while a marksmen who is put new to the business finds it easy to work off his wares on the average man. And the most conceited man might as well acknowledge frankly that his wife can attend to most of the affairs of her own household better than he can attend to them for her.

Woman very often have the most acute perception regarding business affairs. There would probably be fewer failures in the business world if more men would "talk business" with their wives instead of taking it for granted that "women don't understand anything about business." A daily exchange of confidence and a mutual respect for each other's opinions will do much toward making the wheels of any domestic establishment run along smoothly. She is wise who keeps in mind that a little credit is a dangerous thing. Who is able to mend both her husband's clothes and his ways. Who has learned the paradox that to have to you must give it. Who can tell the difference between her first child and a genius. Who acknowledges the allowance made by her husband by making allowance for him. Who appreciates that the largest room in any house is that left for self-improvement.

THE COILS THAT ARE CRUSHING H. M. FLAGLER

How the Most Picturesque Figure in the Standard Oil Group of Multi-millionaires, His Health Shattered by the Collapse of His Costly Key West Railway Enterprise, His Only Son Cast Off Because Unworthy, His Nephew and Heir a Disappointment, His First Wife and a Favorite Niece Hopelessly Insane, and Himself Misunderstood by the Public—How He Morbidly Reads on Every Page of His Life the Word, FAILURE.

CRUSHED in the ruin of his own vast ambitions—is that the fate of Henry M. Flagler, for years the most picturesque of the multi-millionaire figures clustered about Standard Oil?

That was the cautious whisper when Mr. Flagler was taken ill in Florida one Spring and came North in compliance with the advice of physicians that his financial difficulties needed his personal attention. The whisper grew louder. And now, with that great man still interrogated, with Mr. Flagler still ill and plagued with bitter memories that tortured with thoughts of what he—in spite of his millions—considers a failure of his life, it is more than hinted that this brilliant financier is actually staging his own Dead Sea.

He has been cursed for his wealth and position by multitudes; he has been forward upon by his hundreds of dependents and others seeking his favor; he knows the power that vast riches can bring in this world. But with it all he has not been given the chief thing that he has craved, and with which the humblest working man in his employ has been enriched.

Domestic unhappiness has come to him as to the poorest. Mrs. Flagler, his first wife, who has been denied what he most craved.

His most recent disappointment—the one which, it is rumored, was the real cause of a few paltry thousands in cash.

Sunken in spirit and badly weakened from overwork and worry incident to the Key West railroad finish, Mr. Flagler took to his bed in St. Augustine, last April, and has not realized the futility of the ambitions which he centered in a coaling station, Key West in the Summer he was taken to his Hillcrest home in Mamaroneck, in New York's Westchester County, but was later removed to the Mental Washington Home in Stratton Woods, N. H., when symptoms of his nervous prostration developed among themselves. There he is constantly watched over by his personal physician, Dr. Kenan, two trained nurses and his beautiful wife, who has given up all thoughts of opening a home in St. Augustine, which gaily said was in itself a sort of revenge, as the home in question had successfully been established in its accounts for years at the rate of $20,000 a year. So surely had Henry Flagler gone out of his father's life that for years past he has been thought to have no son or daughter. His nobility for an heir has centered in the hope that he might successfully open at the time of his death. A few years ago to Miss Mary Lily Kenan of North Carolina, who was his second wife.

Young Mr. Flagler is bright, handsome young man, who, when a child, had the unenviable misfortune for paper dolls, which he used to play for hours. He dated on these with fluffy gauze skirts, and evening costumes, especially Ann Holbrook, the heavily report, finally declared that there was absolutely none.

Then Flagler decided to marry again, following, as he avowed to his friends, the a man in his position owed this to society. He had a special act passed through the Florida Legislature making favorable laws in general for divorce, and was married to Miss Ives in New York. The adverse publicity on this action, with the failure of the general public to understand him or his motives, was another bitter disappointment.

The woman who was known as the New York belle in Florida has been given every consideration, however, and no one is

ABOUT CLOTHES AND MEN

ONE who reads this newspaper writes:

"Will you publish an editorial telling young men how important it is to think of their personal appearance, their clothes, and their looks generally?"

This is the editorial asked for.

We propose to discuss two things.

First, the importance of thinking SUFFICIENTLY about external appearances.

Second, the importance OF NOT THINKING TOO MUCH ABOUT EXTERNAL APPEARANCES.

The reader whose letter we quote had in mind the mistake made by some men, young and old, in neglecting their outward personality entirely.

Every man WANTS respect from others. He should show that he respects himself. The important evidences of self-respect have little to do with clothing. A man proves self-respect by truth-telling, honesty, justice toward others. The man has little respect for his brain or his mother or father if he betrays himself by using that brain unjustly or dishonorably.

The man who dresses himself flashily does not show self-respect any more than does a peacock spreading and rattling his fine feathers.

But self-respect IS shown in neatness, in clothing clean, not torn, patched if it needs patching. There is more self-respect in a neat patch, worn because the wearer makes good and unselfish use of his money, than in all the different suits of clothes that ever hung up in a dandy's closet.

The aim of the average man is success in business. An appearance of prosperity in clothing often helps on business effort. It may help a man to get a job, help him to keep it, help him to get business while at work but only if he has the right head above the collar. All the fancy clothing in the world won't hide a fool's character, nor will the simplest, plainest clothes hide real ability for long.

A Man Should Be Neither a Peacock Nor Pig

A certain number of men really able are inclined to be ill-kempt, careless, "slouchy." This hurts them, not only because a lack of neatness and carelessness repels, but because carelessness in one direction often indicates carelessness in another.

The man who is untidy is inclined sometimes to pride himself on lack of vanity. He goes around reciting, "a man's a man for a' that." The sloven, in his way, is as weak as the dandy. Unless he has great ability to make men pardon slovenliness and other defects, he is worse than the dandy, for the latter poor creature, at least, WORKS to make himself beautiful.

However, in America, among the young men, the nonsense is chiefly on the side of foppishness and extravagance.

There are unfortunately many boys from thirty down whose one thought is their looks. There could be no more pathetic, pitiful, ridiculous spectacle than a young man giving to dress the concentrated thought and determination that might bring success worth while if properly applied.

How many foolish young men have twenty neckties in a bureau drawer, and not twenty books in the room!

It would be better for such young men if they could get the cigarette stain off of their fingers, the necktie thought out of their minds, and devote their energies TO BEING MEN, before their chance goes by.

Vanity in men is a queer survival of old days. In the animal kingdom the beautiful creature is the male animal. He uses and displays his beauty to attract a mate. The lion has a big mane and a deep voice that seems remarkably beautiful to the plain lioness. The peacock rattles those fine feathers to fascinate the peahen, a plain little creature that you wouldn't notice in a chicken coop.

With us human beings it is different usually. Women wear the fine feathers, the pink dresses, the wide hats, the diamonds. Men, selfishly educating themselves and keeping the women back, have travelled along beyond the stage of finery.

Therefore, the young man worrying about his clothes, pinching himself in toothpick shoes, bothering his father and mother for money to dress, is really a good deal like a girl, or rather like one of those dancing monkeys so proud of the bright markings on their noses.

What should a sensible young man look like? He should dress about as others do—affectation of eccentricity is a weakness and an impertinence.

He should dress plainly and simply, his work clothing made of some stuff that will not show dirt readily, with black, dark blue or gray for extra occasions. He should have plenty or room around his neck to breathe—no pressure on the big blood vessel, no interference with breathing, no pressure on the very delicate pneumogastric nerve which runs up through the neck into the brain. Low collars, half an inch too big.

Shoes should be wide at the toe and low at the heel, to give the foundation of the working machine a chance. The leather should be the kind that a man can polish himself—not the foolish patent leather that keeps out the air and injures the feet.

The man who takes three hundred and sixty-five baths a year, which every man should do as a minimum, can get along and be well liked with two suits of very simple clothing.

When a man's face is honest, his look direct, his back straight, his action in response quick, his clothing clean and plain, he has the outward appearance most becoming and best liked.

Of course, in almost every man's life there is a sort of puppy stage when it is useless to argue against the craze for fine clothes. This puppy stage begins anywhere between fifteen and twenty. It lasts for a short time usually, sometimes long enough to interfere with life's real work.

Parents should recognize that stage in their children, laugh them out of it good-naturedly in a short time if possible; if not, force them out of it, by putting them at hard work and refusing the funds with which to be foolish.

Young men, remember that the more dressed you are—from the fashion point of view—the more you arrange yourself like the worthless dandies, the more you hide your good, solid qualities.

It takes all of a life to amount to anything in these days of competition. Be clean, be neat, and let that end it. You would rather be like Lincoln with his homely clothes than like Beau Brummel, in all his finery.

You are WHAT YOUR THOUGHTS AND WORK ARE. The clothes on your back can't change you for the better, although they may make you look foolish. The ass in the lion's skin was ridiculous. A good young man in the clothing of a donkey is pathetic.

THE JUDGES WHO RULE US

When the procedure for choosing judges in this country was adopted it was assured that men of the highest character would always be named and would perform the apparently restricted functions of their office—that is, they would settle civil disputes, preside at the trials of accused criminals, and, in short, see that every litigant got a square deal.

But gradually the judges have extended their functions, until now, instead of merely interpreting the laws, they make them.

If a Legislature passes a law and the Governor signs it, it is still no law if a court does not like it. The number of laws that have been branded "unconstitutional" after having been passed upon by more thorough lawyers than those who happen to wear the gown is almost beyond counting.

Consequently the courts have power above all the other branches of government

One would think that a liberty-loving people endowing men with such tremendous power would take precautions to protect themselves against the abuse of that power. That is exactly what we have not done.

We choose our judges for long terms or we have them appointed for life. We make impeachment of them the most difficult thing in the world, and we cultivate a reverence for them that amounts to superstition.

Of course, no human being deserves greater reverence than a just and fearless judge; but, on the other hand, no human being deserves greater execration than an unjust and time-serving judge.

Take plain John Doe, lawyer. If he is tricky, dissipated, venal, dull or in any way oblique, you have no particular respect for him. But throw a silk gown over him, set him on a big bench with a canopy over him, and a failure to regard him as infallible is akin to sacrilege—yet he is the same John Doe, no stronger, no better, no brighter, no more scrupulous than when he wrought the tricks of his trade in behalf of whatever rogue hired him.

If all judges were what we assume and what they ought to be, it would be right, perhaps, to trust all to them and keep them in power indefinitely; but as long as our judges are simply human beings, drawn frequently in the lottery of ward politics, it is imbecile to tie the hands of the people from whom they derive their power.

One remedy would be that the terms of judges should be made sufficiently short to make them always cognizant of their responsibility to the people. There would be no danger of an upright and able judge being denied reelection, and, what is of at least equal importance, there would be no danger of the other kind of judge remaining for a dozen years in his position.

The short-term plan would be one way of reforming a bad condition

Another would be to make provision for a recall, by which the people of a community could pronounce against an unfit judge and depose him. All sorts of safeguards could be thrown around this recall.

It might be provided that it should take over 75 per cent. of the vote to unseat a judge.

There would be no danger that a political job or a storm of feeling would deprive a worthy judicial officer of his place on the bench. Twenty-five per cent of the voters could be depended upon to remain calm and nonpartisan in any crisis

Failing these, it will be necessary to curtail the power of the courts, for there is abundant evidence that the time of which Jefferson spoke with fear and dread—when the power of the people's judges might exceed that of the people themselves and coerce the people against their will—is here.

Whenever it is sought to proceed against a powerful interest, individual or corporation, some judge is found to provide an injunction or other legal wall to block the proceedings. It has come to a pass when the principal use of the courts, where such interests are concerned, is to provide a means of avoiding justice instead of determining what is just.

Obviously the same thing under the same conditions cannot be both right and wrong, and yet we have had recently the phenomenon of a New York Supreme Court Justice—Judge Hendrick—denying Attorney-General Jackson the right to begin an action to dissolve the Traction Trust after a United States Justice—Judge Holt—had decided that ample ground existed for a suit to annul this very merger

One or the other of these judges has erred in a matter of great public importance; but, under present conditions, the people are absolutely without means of getting rid of the erring one

All of these things are worth remembering when you next walk up to the ballot box—and they should be kept in mind UNTIL THE CONTROL OF THEIR OWN GOVERNMENT IS RETURNED TO THE PEOPLE.

LOVE Will Always Predominate

THE INSTRUCTOR

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

NOT till we meet with Love in all his beauty,
In all his solemn majesty and worth,
Can we translate the meaning of life's duty,
Which God oft writes in cipher at our birth.
Not till Love comes in all his strength and terror
Can we rend others' hearts; not till then know
A wide compassion for all human error,
Or sound the quivering depths of mortal woe.

Not till we sail with him o'er stormy oceans,
Have we even tempests; hidden in his hand
He holds the keys to all the mysteries of being
Till he unlocks them none can understand.

THE Russian actress Madame Nazimova, is said to have asked for a play without love.

What Madame really asked was to have a play wherein the physical and uttered expressions of love were made secondary to the suggestion of subtle art.

Life is a continual drama; no human being ever lived to maturity without being either a comedian or a tragedian. And love, or the lack of it, is at the bottom of every life drama. The most commonplace lives are oftentimes the most tragic. There is no more tragic thing on earth than the dull routine of an ugly, sordid existence, wherein no emotion higher than the necessity for food and shelter enters, to relieve the monotony of dreary duties.

There are thousands of such people existing on earth to-day; people who are little beyond the jelly fish state of evolution, because for centuries their ancestors have been kept in a state of ignorance and slavery by some form of monopoly of the earth's privileges.

But even among these poor creatures love, for sleeping and the love of little children for whom they bring forth in pain. The men and women may mate as animals mate, unconscious of any real emotion of love or even preference; but the memory of a little child into existence stirs the unused heart strings to sounding the first crude love strains.

Henry Finck, in his most fascinating book, "Romantic Love and Personal Beauty," tells us that romantic love is less than a thousand years old.

Conjugal love is often celebrated by older writers; but, "not marriage, but romantic love," so says our author, "is nowhere mentioned in the Bible, or by Greek or Hebrew authors. Not one of the Greek tragedies is a love story; Euripides, Sophocles, Plato knew of conjugal love and physical passion, but of no modern romantic love."

Referring to classic [illegible] says, "There is no [illegible] in love [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MANY PLAYS TO CONTINUE FOR A WEEK

"The Hypocrites" Is Most Notable New Offering at Local Theatres.

PLAYS that are so successful that they have to be kept on the local stages much longer than originally intended seem to be the proper things just now. With "The Red Mill," "The Soudan" and the grand opera of "Lohengrin" each running into next week, and plays at several other theatres enjoying prosperity for a second week, there are very few openings of importance left for tomorrow. "The Hypocrites," that strong play of satire by Henry Arthur Jones, which had a long run in New York, comes to the Park. Ernest Hogan, that unctuous, dark-toned mixer of fun and song, comes to the Globe in a new play; a dramatic story of what happened since Nellie left her happy domicile is to be told at the Grand Opera House, and the Bowdoin Square Company has a new thriller to offer. The vaudeville and burlesque houses all offer new bills, so the week will be lively and interesting.

What the Theatres Offer.

Park Theatre

It is generally conceded that the dramatic attraction of the week at Boston is "The Hypocrites," and this is to receive its Boston premier to-morrow night at the Park Theatre. Mr. Jones is the author of many plays, including "The Silver King," "Mrs. Dane's Defence," "The Liars," "Saints and Sinners," "The Case of Rebellious Susan," "The Manouvers of Jane," "The Middleman" and many others. A few years ago last August Charles Frohman produced "The Hypocrites" at the Hudson Theatre, New York, and it was the end of the following February before the play was taken off, although only because it was forced out of the theatre by prior bookings. There is a series of very tremendous strength in "The Hypocrites," the brilliant author having successfully handled virility upon the story of a girl who trusts and finds to her sorrow that she has trusted too implicitly to the word of her lover. The satire in the play is most trenchant. Richard Bennet plays the curate, Donald MacLaren young Wilmore, Jessie Millward and Louis Massen his parents, and Mabel Morrison the "wronged girl. Others in the cast are Arthur Elliott, W. H. Denny, J. R. Crawford, Cecil Kingstone, Jay Wilsey, Olive Temple, Helen Tracy, Grace Hadsell and Louise Reed. The stage settings are said to be particularly atmospheric. During the engagement matinees will be given Wednesdays and Saturdays, and a special matinee will be given on Thanksgiving Day.

Globe Theatre

Next week, beginning with the Monday matinee, Messrs. Hurtig & Seamon again offer "the unbleached American," Ernest Hogan, that favorite noble son of Momus, and genuine characteristic scorcher, in a new comedy fource, "The Oyster Man," in which Hogan reproduces his famous creation of "Rufus Rastus," with a supporting company of nearly seventy colored theatrical lights. While "The Oyster Man" perhaps chances as a musical comedy, as it possesses more individual song hits and special ensemble vocal numbers than the average comic opera, while the production in its entirety is a gorgeous display. Master of his ways in "funland," and in "The Oyster Man" is seen in his happiest vein.

Boston Theatre

Again it has been found desirable to extend the term of "The Soudan," as the attention at the Boston Theatre, the demand for seats continuing so great that the capacity of the big auditorium is constantly taxed. For to-morrow evening Manager Norcross has planned a unique event. He styles it a "British Night," and in honor of it Boston's many loyal new residents who were "born an English-man" are to participate in the "grand parade" of the Trafalgar Square scene, most of them having, in one time or another in their English army service, participated in similar ceremonies. Nearly a hundred of these veterans are to join in this parade, with a large proportion of "kilt men" and a big band of pipers.

Majestic Theatre

At the Majestic Theatre David Belasco's "The Rose of the Rancho" continues to win the enthusiastic praise of large audiences. Seats are now selling as far ahead as for the last week in January. Yesterday and for the two performances on Tuesday and Friday, Thursday matinees are on Wednesday and Saturday. It should be noted that the curtain rises at 8 o'clock for the evening performances and at 2 for the matinees. There has never been on the Boston stage a more vivid illustration of the genius of David Belasco than is to be found in "The Rose of the Rancho." Frances Starr as Jupiita has achieved fame and stardom in the role, and Charles Richman, A. Hamilton Revelle, Frank Losee, John W. Cope, J. Harry Bagtino, in fact each individual member of the company, rises up gloriously to the call for realism and verity made by the lines and situations.

Castle Square Theatre

Two weeks have not been enough to satisfy the many who are anxious to hear Wagner's "Lohengrin" at the Castle Square, and consequently the third and last week of its run will begin Monday evening. "Lohengrin" has fulfilled all expectations. Wagner's masterpiece is an easy undertaking, but the Castle Square singers have proved themselves fully equal to their task. Miss Clara Lane and Miss Blanche Ehrman will sing Ortrud as has with Harry Davies and George Tallman as Lohengrin, Lucien Le Baron and Hale Norcross as Uetrud, J. K. Murray and Forest Huff as Telramund, Francis Joyce and Boyle as the King and W. H. Pringle as the herald.

Colonial Theatre

There were 31,582 people, according to the statistician of the Colonial Theatre, who saw "The Red Mill" during the past fortnight. The second week has been begun in point of attendance than the first and its advance sale is so great that the box office people have been obliged to accept bookings three weeks in advance. The tremendous demand is reported for Thanksgiving Day's two performances. Montgomery and Stone and their clever cast of assistants have certainly caught the fancy of Boston theatregoers. Their engagement will be one of the memorable ones of the present theatrical season.

Hollis Street Theatre

Lulu Glaser has again caught the fancy of Bostonians and has set the whole city talking about the jollity of "Lola From Berlin" at the Hollis Street Theatre. Sometimes Boston and New York do not exactly agree as to the merits of a play, but there has been no difference of opinion whatever concerning "Lola." It is the general consensus of opinion that this is the funniest comedy by John J. McNally that has ever been seen on the Boston stage, and that Miss Glaser has never had a character that gave her half the chances of being funny that are afforded in this production. One of the funniest in it C. Horn, who has already appeared in Boston in a great variety of characters, and is funnier than ever in the part which he now assumes.

Tremont Theatre

Vesta Victoria stays for one more week at the Tremont Theatre, at the head of Klaw & Erlanger's advanced vaudeville festival bill. She will sing new songs, this week, each of which will be character dressed. Among the other star entertainers in the bill will be Joe Hart's musical comedy act and dancing specialty; Keith's Melcina, the prima donna whose voice has a range of three octaves; Mlle. Agoust, female juggler; Leo Carille, surrealist of Variety," and war correspondent of the New York Herald in the Japan-Chinese war; Jean Cermont with his dog, Pip, and his chicken circus for the ladies and children; the Dolgoff Brothers, Russian musical bar performers; the Lawsons and their talked dog; new unheasted pictures.

Keith's Theatre

At Keith's this week lovers of Dickens have a treat in store in the engagement of Bramsby Williams, with his remarkable impersonations of the characters Charles Dickens made popular. The return of Al Leach to vaudeville is notable. He is to be supported by Rosalie. The Willy Pantzer troupe of acrobats are supreme in their line. The Novelties with their musical specialties are scored so heartily this week that they have been retained as a leading feature. "The Old Neighborhood," by Callahan and St. George, is one of the best things in vaudeville; while the Murray Sisters are two very pretty girls who know what the public want in the way of songs. The bill will also include Full Bennett, with vocalisms; Elsie Harvey and Boys, in a dancing novelty; The Abbotts, sketch; The Hurleys, acrobats; Mozarto, instrumentalist; Hagan and Westcott, in a playlet, and the Kinetograph.

Orpheum Theatre

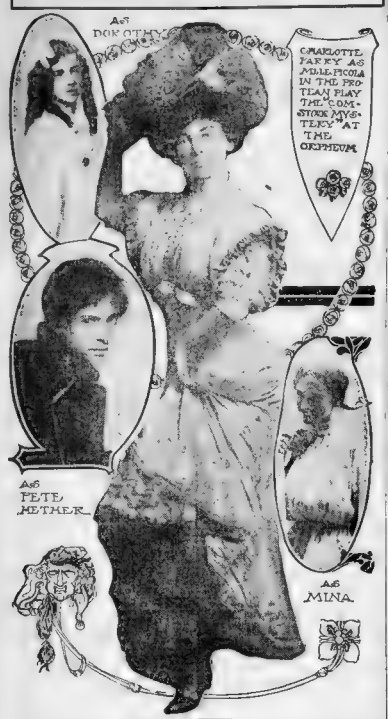
Such headliners as Charlotte Parry, Amelia Selbini, Polly Pickles's Pets in Pet and Paul Barry's Bears are other strong acts make up a programme of exceptional merit. When Charlotte Parry made her first appearance in Boston two months ago in the "Comstock Mystery," her success was instantaneous. She appears in seven different characters, going from one to another with rapidity almost incredible. The interest is not relaxed for a single minute, and when the final curtain goes down on Miss Parry as "Dear Father," the same boy, this is the signal for a demonstration that is seldom seen in vaudeville. Lala Selbini, "the hair-raising beauty," who was a sensation at the Hammerstein Roof Garden last Summer, does some wonderful feats on the bicycle, dressed in street costume. Like Charming she disrobes until revealed in bathing costume. Much comedy is furnished by a pickaninny assistant. In spinador of stage setting and electrical effects, Polly Pickles's Pets in Pretzel is a feature. Young woman impersonates different animals. The bill also contains such features as Paul Barry's bears, a Parisian animal act; Albert Herr, comedian. Friend & Downing, Katie Rooney, singing comedienne, Clark, Bergman and Mahoney, singers and dancers, and the La Mase Brothers, comic acrobats.

Grand Opera House

"Since Nellie Went Away," a drama in four acts and twelve scenes, by Owen Davis and under the direction of A. H. Woods, will have its first performance in this city at the Grand Opera House tomorrow, depicting incidents in the lives of both rich and poor are said to be depicted with remarkable skill and interest. It is a representation of a life saving station on the Connecticut coast, and of a storm at sea, during which Nellie is rescued by the life savers. The most thrilling incidents in the lives of both rich and poor are said to be depicted with remarkable skill and interest. It is a representation of a life saving station on the Connecticut coast, and of a storm at sea, during which Nellie is rescued by the life savers. The most thrilling incident is the rescue of a boy by the hero from a burning steamer. The scene is laid in a fishing village on the Connecticut coast, and the climax is reached when Nellie, who has been accused of a crime she did not commit, is rescued

GIRL PLAYS SEVEN ROLES

Charlotte Parry has achieved distinction of being greatest protean artist on American stage.



A young American girl, Charlotte Parry, has sprung into prominence within a year as the most remarkable protean artist on the American stage. Bostonians who have seen Henri De Vries and Mr Roberts freely accord to Miss Parry the credit for more originality, better execution and the power to get more of human interest into her characters than do these men. She is to return to this week, playing at the Orpheum.

Miss Parry has seven distinctly different characters during her sketch, ranging from a negro boy to the dainty French woman from the standpoint of the Yankee Normal Miss, the Swedish servant and the old, wrinkled washboard serving woman. She is alone in each boy and makes up before each with remarkable rapidity. The sketch is called "The Comstock Mystery," and the incidents represented follow closely upon the murder of Mr Comstock.

It was while playing in stock that Miss Parry developed her versatility to the artistic finish which has won her many honors. Having a new role in a new play week after week developed rapid character delivery and the ability to make quick changes. It was but natural that Miss Parry would portray so many parts in the same piece. Just what this means does not reach the understanding of the theatre goer, whose idea of the drama are formed from the comfort of a comfortable chair, but if they knew as a actor in all shudder at the more than idea of it. It is worse than that with which a certain distinguished gentleman characterized war.

Miss Parry hired her efforts to differentiate characters in the same play, and her fellow players liked them, not to say anything about the managers to whom it meant the saving of salaries. Persistently pursuing this trend she sought to differentiate and individualize each character that she portrayed, and it was not long before it dawned upon her that she was a separate character with a life of its own.

The rest of this undertaking, accompanied by novelty in long hours of study and toil, was the gradual growth of characters Parry left an accepted only quality but of versatility. Nowadays play actors are specialists, and year after year seem only to that certain type of character in which they have been most successful. But the Orpheum star this week stands separate and apart, and a character artist, she is successful in any character, male or female.

After all it is gratifying to know that it is just a plain, honest American girl that has succeeded in doing and doing better that which Europe tried to do with the same piece. Just what this means a big name star

SOCIETY GREETS LOVELY DEBUTANTES WHO BOW AT BRILLIANT BOSTON FETES

By a Society Woman

LO, the conquering heroines come! Buds, whole battalions of them, bowing and blushing their way into the Hub's most exclusive ranks. November belongs to the debutantes.

Persistently they claim their own, and the social calendar is crowded with affairs in their honor. Ultra-extravagant functions prepared for them loom largely on the horizon of coming events. All others in society make way for them in their triumphal progress, and from now until Christmas the days will be almost exclusively given over to their entertainment.

Among the most conspicuous of the lovely lot are Miss Helen Sears, daughter of Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, who has just returned from Europe and is at her Arlington street home for the Winter; the Misses Evelyn and Nora Thayer, the two pretty blonde daughters of the John E. Thayers; Miss Katherine Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Warren; Miss Ellen Farnsworth, daughter of the William Farnsworths, of Dedham; Miss Claire Means, daughter of Mrs. Arthur Little and sister of Gordon Means, whose wedding to Miss Marjorie Lee took place in New York Thursday; Miss Jean Bird, daughter of the Charles S. Birds, of Walpole and Beacon streets; Miss Barbara Howe, daughter of Mrs. James Murray Howe, of Milton, who was presented last week at a reception and tea; the Misses Pauline and Eugenie Davis, the two attractive daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davis; Miss Margaret DePord; Miss Ruth Nickerson, daughter of Mrs. Albert Nickerson, and the brunette beauty of the bud-bouquet; Miss Miriam Shaw, daughter of Mr. Francis Shaw; Miss Bessie Lee, daughter of Mrs. George Lee and a sister of Miss Marie Lee, who has been such a belle since her debut; and Miss Suzannah Cunningham, daughter of the Frederick Cunninghams, of Brookline.

Friday was certainly a gala day for the buds, for besides numerous receptions and teas, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer gave a handsome dinner-dance at her Lancaster estate in honor of her two nieces, the Misses Evelyn and Nora Thayer. Among the girls who attended were Helen Sears, Katherine Warren, Helen Thomas, Margaret Stackpole, Joan Bird, Nancy Lilley and Mary Amory.

Next Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Warren are giving a dinner-dance at the Polo clubhouse in honor of their daughter.

A pretty debutante affair on Thursday was the at home given by Mrs. Edwin Bleske to introduce her daughter, Miss Barbara Bleske. The decorations were of palms and chrysanthemums, and the dainty maid was prettier than ever in her gown of white lace.

All the debutantes are interested in the three subscription dances to be given for them in December at the Somerset. Mrs. Reginald Gray, Mrs. I. Tucker Burr and Mrs. John E. Thayer are the matrons who will have the dances in charge.

Mrs. Beard is arranging a series of dinner-dances at her Arlington street house in honor of Miss Helen Sears. Cards will be issued shortly.

DAN CUPID UNITES OLD NEW ENGLAND FAMILIES IN QUIET GROTON TOWN

Nathaniel Emmons and Miss Lawrence Slip Out of Town for Quiet Ceremony.

Society is showering its congratulations upon Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Franklin Emmons, whose quiet marriage Thursday afternoon surprised the friends of both bride and groom.

The marriage unites two of the finest old New England families, the Lawrences, foremost for almost a century in the development of New England manufacturing, and the Emmonses, prominent in the mercantile life of Boston.

The bride, who was Miss Elizabeth Breck Lawrence of Groton, announced only the engagement of her daughter to Mr. Emmons on Monday, and after a carriage drive of half an hour in Groton they presented themselves at the door of Town Clerk Apsley to file notice.

Town Clerk Officiates.

At 4:30 o'clock, and with no witnesses present save members of either family to the marriage ceremony was performed by Town Clerk Apsley. The bride wore a simple travelling dress of dark brown, and immediately after the ceremony left with the groom for her home in the upper part of the town. In the evening the happy pair sailed wedding tour, and in a fortnight they take up their residence in Detroit.

The bride, a charming blonde, noted for her beauty as well as her wealth, divides New York and London as in Boston she is a general favorite, has been among the fashionable set, of a most independent and retiring turn of mind always preferring the simplicity of occasions rather than the ostentatious show of fashion.

Just where Mr. and Mrs. Emmons are ordering their honeymoon, not even their closest friends know. But congratulations, hearty and generous, are pouring in upon both families.

Minister to London.

Abbott Lawrence, grandfather of the bride, was minister under President Fillmore to the Court of St. James. Abbott Lawrence came within one vote of becoming President of the United States. At the Whig convention which nominated Zachary Taylor for President of the United States Lawrence ranked among the strongest candidates for the president were Abbott Lawrence of Massachusetts and Millard Fillmore of New York.

Jeff and Davis separated the two candidates. Votes changing gradually were given in favor of Millard Fillmore, because a New York candidate would be sure of this a candidate from New England, and after a deadlock of nine ballots Taylor died and Fillmore was appointed President by the Whig convention within the gift of the President.

It was in honor of Abbott Lawrence that Lawrence, Mass., was named. Now Lawrence, Mass., is not only the industry most remarkable among the Lawrences.

Nathaniel Frank Emmons is a Harvard man. Mr. Emmons has been in ... for ... years. He ... a member of the ... and ... and ... and ... President Cleveland.

SOCIETY OPERETTA FOR KINDERGARTEN

There ... much interest in the coming performance of the charming operetta, "In Doors Again," on the evening of ... at ... o'clock, and the afternoon of November 30, at Jordan Hall, Huntington avenue, and for which some of the most famous ... are ... The ... Miss Mary Quincy A. Shaw, Mrs. David Allen, Mrs. Jay A. Ward Howe, Mrs. Frank H. Monks, Mrs. Arthur D. Hall, Mrs. Robert Woods, Miss Elizabeth Rotch and Miss Alice Putney.

Many young women prominent socially and gifted musically are to take conspicuous parts in the performances of this operetta, which is to be sung under the auspices of the Lucy Wheelock Kindergarten Association. This organization ... has conducted a charity in the South Bay Union kindergarten, which is doing great good for the poor of its neighborhood, and it is in aid of maintaining this work that the association has planned this musical event.

CHAPTER VI.

ARCHIE was sensible of a line of reserve in the manner of the gentleman who had been introduced to him as Mr. Marriott. He took a second look at him. Really, he did look like a prosperous old codger, and he was a speaking likeness of Archie's father, he said.

He's a young lawyer to see Koerner about something," Archie explained. "I met him at the train and brought him out in a cab. He's got a case against Koerner, and he's going to bring suit. Mr. Marriott, this is Archie Bell, a friend of mine from Chicago, who has just arrived in town. He's going to be with us for a few days, and I'm going to see that he has a good time. Archie, Mr. Marriott is a lawyer, and he's going to show you the town."

Archie looked at Marriott and down here Well waive."

"Well now," said Marriott, with the professional shake of persuading eloquence to dissipate any objection, "affairs should be managed. You see, I don't know the circumstances of the case at all. I know what I've read in the papers—Ah, well," said he, never mind what they say. They're tryin' to stick me for that Pinkerton fire. You know, Mr. Marriott, I didn't have nothin' to do with it. I—"

Archie moved forward as an appeal that was quite convincing.

"No, I know that."

"No, sir. I won't pass to know that I didn't. I—I—I know. But I had to. Mr. Marriott, I had to. I—I—I—I don't you? He agita ed me to it; he agitated me to it.

He rep ated the word thus strangely and repeated a moment later as if it gave him relief and comfort

"He agitated me to it. I had to, I did not; that's all. It was a case of self-defen e."

Archie's Story

Marriott was silent for a few moments. Then he asked:

"Have you talked to the police?"

Archie laughed.

"They gave me the third degree, but—there was nothin' doin'."

Marriott was pleased to find that he did not have to face the usual admission of guilt-producing fruits before he left. At the west on

"Of course, that don't make no difference. They can frame up a confession all right.

"They'd hardly do anything that desperate," said Marriott, trying to cope with the gr at assurance.

"Well," said Archie, "I wouldn't put it past 'em."

Marriott finished his cigarette in a reflective silence, dropped it to the floor and imitated Archie's stare with which he extinguished it. Then he sighed, straightened up and said:

"Well, Archie, let's get down to bust ness, let me the particulars."

And Archie narrated the events that led to his arrest.

"I wanted to see the old people—and the other fellows." He used the word thing, and Marriott did not break the silence.

"Mr. Marriott," the boy suddenly asked, "where is Gus?"

"I don't know."

"What's become of her? Do you know that?

"No, I said Marriott. He felt that Archie was eying him shrewdly.

"You know," said Archie in the lowest tones, "I'm afraid, I've got a kind of hunch—that she's—gone wrong."

Marriott feared his own silence, but he could not speak.

"I—I—I," exclaimed the boy, in a tone that discussed the matter as far as he wanted to go for it. "I guess, right under the hooks for me. I guess I'll go across the street, get the nearest bible and have a good, gumshoe. Darby, he sees him—Darby and Joan—and everything. We could see his eyes mlowe us, and we gets on a freight car. There ain't a bull in sight, and we was in it all right. Boy, oh! Did you ever see such a lovely town as Cheyenne, Mr. Marriott?

Marriott owned that he had not

KISSES SPOIL THE TEETH? SMACK!

By WALTER A. SINCLAIR.

[Boston scientists have discovered that kissing can cause teeth to drop out.—News Item.]

COME, let us spoil our teeth, Beloved, and do not stop to frown.

We'll move away to Brooklyn—to the Painless Dental Town.

We'll cross the bridge to bridge-work, it's a very filling place

So why can we not for Dentists' bills? Let's spoil a tooth—like this

ALTHOUGH our noble President has aimed across the West—

Of course, he only kissed the kids—we note his teeth are best.

While Taft on the other hand, we have our gummy friend, John D.,

And we would ever pick him out to be a kissing bee?

What can this London scientist reply to that, forsooth?

THEN do upon the coward who, at hearing this, retreats!

He cannot be the Candy Kid who has no tooth for sweets.

Though teeth may be as false as false, we each can buy a set,

While kisses that are chinaware are not perfected yet.

I do not fear the toothache, Love, and also, why should you?

Let Cupid get his pincers out and yank a tooth or two

Teddy-B and Teddy-G; the Bear Detectives

Verses by Seymour Eaton—Drawings by C. H. Twelvetrees.

"We work for fun and charge no fee."
Signed TEDDY-B and TEDDY-G.

THE Teddy Bears hung up a sign
On a big pine tree with a piece of twine,
Which read like this in letter bold:
"Dear children all, both young and old,
Who troubles have of every kind,
Or treasures lost you cannot find,
Or problems which you cannot do,
Or things you know which can't be true;
Or if goblins big or fairies small,
Or princes smart or giants tall
Have cost you sleep or spoiled your play,
Please read this sign hung here to-day;
Then bring your puzzles, troubles, cares,
And load them on the Teddy Bears;
Two smart detectives you shall see
Who'll solve for you all mystery."
This postcript added in brilliant red
That all could see the thing it said:
"We work for fun and charge no fee,"
Signed TEDDY-B and TEDDY-G.

The first to call was little Bo-Peep,
Who was in distress about her sheep,
She was dressed so fine and looked so sweet
And seemed so glad the Bears to meet
That TEDDY-G just lost his head
And this is what, folks say, he said:
"Please, Little Bo-Peep, don't look so blue;
I'd like to walk the field with you
And be your sheep, or goat, or calf,
Or Your Teddy Bear, if you'll only laugh."

But TEDDY-B with serious face
Asked questions quick about the case:

1--The Mystery of the Sheep's Tails

Copyright, 1907, by Seymour Eaton.

"How many sheep have you, my child?
Are they black or white? Are they tame or wild?
The age of each? Their weight and height?
Did they go alone? Were they out at night?"
Bo-Peep told all to TEDDY-B,
For she knew those sheep like A B C

"My sheep," she said, "went off to play
And walked so far they lost their way.
As they left their home the path to find
Each had his tail hung on behind;
Not fastened on with string or nail,
But growing there, an all right tail;
And when back they came it made me weep,
For there wasn't a tail on a single sheep,

"They crossed the stream on a wabbly plank
And followed the footprints along the bank."

And now, good sirs, I've come to see
If you can solve this mystery."

* * *

"You come with us," said TEDDY-B,
"We'll search each field and lake and tree
And find those tails and the robbers jail
Who left six sheep without a tail,"
So off they skipped, Bo-Peep between,
Across the fields of pastures green.

They tracked the sheep by marks they found
Where the grass was nibbled along the ground.
They crossed a stream on a wabbly plank
And followed the footprints along the bank
Till they found some wool both black and white
Where the sheep had slept the previous night;
And then, like Pinkerton or Sherlock Holmes,
This wool they fitted to a pair of combs
Which Bo-Peep used each night, she said,
To curl their tails 'fore they went to bed.

In the afternoon they reached a barn
Where a weaver old was winding yarn
Outside the door in an easy chair,
Enjoying the shade and country air,
"Bo-Peep, stay here," said TEDDY-B,
"And hide behind this big oak tree,
While we go look his factory through
And ask for a job of work to do,
Or ask for a meal, or a place to sleep,
Just to see if he knows bout the sheep.
Detectives always pretend to be Different folks from those you see,
And we must be careful not to say
What we are searching for to-day.
It seems to me we're getting hot
And we'll find the tails in this very spot."

The weaver's face had wrinkles kind,
And eyes of blue, though nearly blind,
And beard and hair of snowy white,
And a voice so sweet and so polite
That as he sat there in the shade
And told them all about his trade—
How stockings for boys and girls are made—
The Bears just listened to what he said
And let the old man talk ahead.

"This wool," said he, "living in this heap
Was scissored off the tails of sheep,
It's the finest wool in all my barn
And will make the very softest yarn.
I have about a hundred bales
Sent me by sheep, all off their tails,
But this pile here is from six sheep,
The pets, I'm told, of Little Bo-Peep.
They called on me two days ago,
And when they heard 'twas really so
That children's stockings are always made
From wool off tails, in every shade,
And that wool from tails is the very best

"The Bears just listened to what he said
And let the old man talk ahead."

To make for toes the warmest nest,
These six good sheep, three black, three white,
Clipped off their tails with much delight,
And left them here and said that they
Would never take a cent of pay.
They knew, they said, when Bo-Peep was told
That wool from tails kept out the cold
She'd say all right and never scold."

"I want to ask," said TEDDY-G,
As Bo-Peep stepped from behind the tree,
"Do wagging tails inside the shoe
Make little holes where toes peep through?
Do tails in stockings wag so quick
That a fellow's foot just has to kick?"
"Oh, yes, that's true about the feet,"
Said the kind old man as he rose to greet
The little girl with golden hair,
Who skipped across to where they were.

* * *

"And this," said he, "is Little Bo-Peep;
I'm glad to meet you; I know your sheep."
He then told her all he said before
About the stockings that children wore.
And the wool he used and the kind he sold
Made from sheep's tails, to keep out the cold,
She thanked him gladly as they said good-by
And promised sure she wouldn't cry.

The Bears walked back with Little Bo-Peep
To take her home and to see her sheep;
To learn their names and see them fed
And to watch her put them each to bed,
"And the prettiest sight," said TEDDY-B,
"That any Teddy Bear could see,

"And to watch her put them each to bed".

WOMAN'S IDENTITY IS VEILED IN MYSTERY BY POLICE

Federal Authorities Jealously Guard the Secret of Her Name and Residence.

SAID TO BE SOCIETY LADY

Federal Officer Hints That the Husband's Family Is Very Prominent.

IS RICH IN HER OWN NAME

Was with Campbell When Latter Was Arrested in Hartford, Ct.

WHO is the wealthy young society matron who was with A. L. Campbell of Boston, when United States Inspector Donald S. McLeod swooped down on him in a Hartford hotel and arrested him on a charge of using the mails for fraudulent purposes?

The Federal authorities are making a mystery of the woman's identity. They let it be known at one time that she is married to a Harvard graduate, son of a retired Boston merchant; that his family moves in exclusive Back Bay circles; that the name is one of the greatest in the country. That much and nothing more.

Not one of Campbell's friends in Boston, not even Inspector McLeod himself, professes to know who the woman is. Campbell refuses to tell. Those with whom he conferred in Hartford, when he was arrested, say he refused to say a word.

Will Sue for Divorce.

Some of the Federal officials have known for the past three months of the woman's identity, according to Inspector McLeod. It is the opinion of many of those who have transacted the business that a divorce will soon be applied for.

"Husband and wife are not living together," said Inspector McLeod. "That is the fact. And I am not at liberty to say more than that. I am not at liberty to say whether or not I know the woman's name. FACING DEATH, MRS. BRADLEY IS HOPEFUL OF ACQUITTAL moved to Colorado Springs, and a few years after that settled permanently in Salt Lake City.

As the latter place did not afford the educational advantages then that it has now, Miss Annie Maddison was sent to Denver to be educated. She graduated from the Denver high school and took a business course, later becoming bookkeeper and cashier in a large mercantile establishment in Denver. About Annie Maddison's girlhood and early womanhood there has never been a word of scandal or suspicion uttered.

"I have at no time known the woman," said Judge Lusenge one of the attorneys for the defense, "whose lips would utter a word of reproach against her unless met Arthur Brown. It was he who dragged her down, and it was from her lips that I heard a story of his inhuman acts that transcended anything that has ever come to me in all of my experience at the bar. For his treatment of her, I arraign him as a fiend in human form."

Not a witness who was put on the stand by the government uttered a word reflecting upon the girl's character before she fell under the dominion of Brown, and the former high character of the girl will be strongly urged to the jury when the time comes to sum up in its social trial.

It was in 1895 that Annie Maddison returned to Salt Lake City. Her uncle was then superintendent of the water works there, and he became a clerk in his office. About the same time she was introduced to Arthur Brown by that same uncle. Brown was climbing the ladder of fame.

Miss Maddison began to develop those talents for public life which, political opportunities for women in Utah being great, gave promise of a high career for her. In 1903 she married Clarence Bradley, who turned out to be a gambler and a reprobate. Two children—still living—resulted from the marriage, but, after a few years Bradley drifted out of her life.

Sent Her 600 Letters.

Still her character remained unsmirched. She became one of the prime movers in the Woman's Club of Salt Lake City. She introduced Mrs. Arthur Brown into the organization. She was nominated by the Republican party for city auditor and while beaten at the polls, she made a spirited and creditable campaign. She was elected to the Republican State Central Committee, and there began the tragic incidents which led her to the foot of the gallows.

There were two factions, the Browns and the anti-Browns. Political principles alone carried Mrs. Bradley into the ranks of the Brown faction, and she fell under the influence of the future United States Senator.

It was in 1898 that Mrs. Bradley and Brown became openly associated in politics, and three years intervened before the world would know that Arthur Brown whose loose living was a by word through out Utah—had added Mrs. Bradley to his list of victims.

The letters which those three years will be told by Mrs. Bradley herself upon the witness stand. To her counsel she has already revealed the story of his perusal of the 600 letters of this torrid wooing. All of his letters of this period have been religiously preserved—there are more than 600 of them.

Day after day, week after week, telephoned her, sent her telegrams, showered attentions upon her, flooded her footsteps paved her with promises and assurances. Arthur Brown, Jr., was born first. He is seven years old now. Martin Montgomery Brown, another child, was born four years ago. Both were named by their father. Between the births of these two children Brown was climbing the ladder of fame.

Mrs. Bradley will also tell herself the story of the years that followed. It is a staggering story of broken promises and ghastly inhumanity.

More important than all, it will be heard by the jury testimony of the strongest character—by words of some of the best known men of Utah, friends of Brown, who have come here to testify in favor of the woman.

In the years that followed his role over her became absolute. She was his slave. The denial of their association became open. The newspapers were filled with it. Mrs. Brown attacked Mrs. Bradley in the poker. In Brown's office one day the wife of the latter's enemies attempted to scratch the eyes of Mrs. Bradley. The wife openly threatened the life of her husband's harm. As a result of this in 1901 Brown fought a duel, which gave to Mrs. Bradley, with instructions to use it in self-protect against the man's wife.

Breaks His Promises.

Mrs. Brown had them both arrested on charges growing out of their relations, and Mrs. Bradley saved Brown from State prison by refusing to testify against him.

At Brown's instance, Mrs. Bradley got a divorce from her husband. Mrs. Brown went out at last by her husband's brutal treatment, died.

"Get a divorce and I will marry you," Brown said to Mrs. Bradley, but Mrs. Bradley had looked forward to this since the day that she had first yielded under Brown's influence. He promised it to her, and only to snatch it away from her again. As frequently as he promised her honorable marriage, so frequently did he break the promise. She lived on deferred hope for years. Children were plentiful for a time.

It is the old story. Everyone remembers how, at last, Brown left Salt Lake City to come to Washington to argue a case before the Supreme Court of the United States. He was confronted in his room at the Hotel Raleigh by the woman and shot down, dead following from the wound two days later.

He had broken his final promise. When she raised with it he answered coldly and disavowed the parentage of his children cursed her, smiled at her, and turn up lifted. She shot him down. Shot him with the weapon he had provided her with. Shot him with the revolver he had handed to her to use on his own wife.

Brown was cut off at the height of his career, by the hand which, unjust and compassing, inevitable. Here is a living death for Brown in the coroner's office, a cooling creature—not a spark of her for nothing left, and yet a figure in the splendid manhood and deep, where one may read as easily as on a book the whole story of her sorrows. See the head, which once rode proudly from her shoulders, slanted now at that fatal angle—eyes closed by turnout to the floor. Death clings to her face marks a year of torture. She is only thirty-four, but gray streaks are beginning to show deeply her hair.

As the story of the tragedy is rehearsed her shoulders will sag and her head, upon her knees—finally hands they are, that make one wonder where they got the strength to pull a trigger. Her frame trembles at the sudden remembrance of some long forgotten pang.

Becomes a Mother Again.

Below stairs in the picture chamber Mrs. Bradley, no less the prisoner, becomes the mother. Coory, the youngest boy, prattles, gully, now and then, with the nurse of the teddy bear, now clinging to his mother's apron string. Brown, Jr., the living image of his father, will more reserved, lingers in the rear and shows by his wondering eyes the awakening mind. He senses in some way what it is all about.

When the time comes to whisk the mother away, the children climb up into the window seat and peer through the bars, white, and the wagon rumbles off through the dusty roads to the jail in Salt Lake City.

There, when night settles down, Mrs. Bradley will be locked in a cell, which, while into strong relief the character of this woman who inherited wonderful power. From the wall of her cell she takes down the picture of the man she killed, and her eyes fill with tears as she imprints passionate kisses upon the beloved features. She whispers good night to it, and creeping to her bunk, fails to her knees and prays.

Free or compelled to suffer the extreme penalty of the law, Mrs. Bradley will in any event carry her love for Brown in heart to the very end.

"One of the greatest difficulties we have met with," said Judge Powers to-day, "is in getting Mrs. Bradley to tell us anything about herself. She will in no way reflect upon him. Her affection for him is as strong as ever."

The trial will be resumed on Monday morning. It is believed it will take a week to present the case of the defense. It will probably bring Mrs. Bradley to the witness stand about Thursday.

"There is a mass of documentary evidence and in reserve by the defense, perhaps the most important of which is that of a letter mailed on a single sheet of paper bearing the business card of "Arthur Brown, Attorney-at-law, Salt Lake City." With the card removed, written in a miserable hand, which the defense says, will be identified as Brown's handwriting.

"I acknowledge that Arthur Brown, Jr., and Mary Montgomery Brown are my children by Mrs. Annie M. Bradley."

ARTHUR BROWN.

EXPLAINS WORK OF THE PEOPLE'S LOBBY

Henry Beach Needham talked about "The People's Lobby" in Washington to members of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday afternoon and said that it told the truth about measures before Congress.

"The records we keep," he said, "are not entirely popular with some Congressmen but the People's Lobby is working for you and your interest and is opposed to those who are working against them. But for the lobby for the Pure Food Bills it might not have been organized. For seventeen years the Pure Food Bill always passed one house and was killed in the other. But united action finally resulted in the enactment of one which is now the law. The success of this movement resulted in a permanent lobby to look after the people's interest."

W. Douglas talked about the Wall man airship, which is yet to try to reach the North Pole and J. C. Gilreade spoke about educating the negro.

"PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE? NO!" LAUGHS MURRAY CRANE

Junior Massachusetts Senator Amused at Boom Launched by Henry Watterson.

"I am not a candidate for President," said United States Senator W. Murray Crane last evening in a statement to the Boston Sunday American.

The Senator's remark was in reply to the boomlet launched in his direction by Colonel Henry Watterson editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal in the raising the national political situation at Boston.

The journalist-editor said he would vote for Bryan as against Roosevelt in the event of the latter's renomination, but added: "The Republican party has many men of presidential timber, notably Taft, Hughes and Crane of Massachusetts. Senator Crane would make a very strong man, for New England has not furnished a President in many years."

Senator Crane was communicated with by long distance telephone at his home in Dalton.

"Would you accept the Republican nomination if it were tendered to you?" he was asked by the American.

Mr. Crane laughed heartily.

"I haven't the slightest idea that such an emergency will arise," he replied. "No, I am not a candidate for the Presidency. I have never considered the matter. Thank you for asking me."

"Who do you believe will be the nominee of the Republican party?" he was next asked.

"I have no knowledge. I am ready to make any predictions as to that, really," was the answer.

TWO WARSHIPS FOR BRAZIL.

Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, Nov. 16.—Two cruisers, each of 21,000 tons displacement, are to be added to the Brazilian navy, at the Armstrong dockyards in England. The present military activity is taken to indicate that the peace of South America is likely to be disturbed in the near future.

DEMOCRATS SPLIT IN WOBURN FIGHT

Woburn, Nov. 16.—A lively contest is being waged here for the Democratic Mayoralty nomination between James E. Feeney, brother of ex-Mayor John F. Feeney, chairman of the State Committee, and Lawrence Read, who was Mayor in 1904.

The latter was defeated at the caucuses last year, but declares that he will win at the primaries next Thursday.

James E. Feeney and James H. Connolly entered the race, but have withdrawn and thrown their strength to Feeney.

Mayor William K. Blodgett is unopposed for renomination and will run independent.

Ward 6 held its caucus for the Democratic committee in the Board of Police Worke Commissioner William H. Feeney, who was defeated last year, and ex-Alderman William H. Conway.

Ex-Commissioner Elisha H. Haywood, whose term as Water Commissioner expires this month, voted in Ward 6.

A new political organization has been formed in this city under the name of the Young Men's Democratic Club, with Edward F. McDonough as secretary, to forward the interests of Feeney for Mayor.

CATHOLIC SOCIETY ENTERTAINS 200

"New Members' Night" was observed by the Young Men's Catholic Association of Boston last evening at their clubrooms at No. 41 East Newton street. Over 200 members were present, and among them were twenty-five new members.

Addresses were made by President D. F. Sheehan, Rev. F. X. Doran of the Cathedral, Edmund F. Rawston, former president of the Catholic Union, and W. J. Fitzgerald.

Following the business meeting a concert was given by Lawrence Stedman, Max Laserm and Will J. Haley, after which a dutch supper was served.

Next Wednesday evening the association will have as its guests the Young Men's Sodality of the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

SOCIALISTS AT ODDS.

Paris, Nov. 16.—The French Socialists face a serious split in their ranks, precipitated by the anti-militarist activity of Hervey Lagardelle, the leader of Socialist members of the Chamber of Deputies. He strongly assisted the "Unparliamentary" line of conduct, and a merry melee is reported.

EVERY VOTER WHO WANTS BOSTON FREE FROM GRAFT SHOULD WEAR THIS BUTTON

COULTHURST TAG FOR HONEST VOTERS

Independence League Is Giving Away Neat Buttons with Candidate's Picture.

Every voter in Boston who wants to see the city well governed for the next two years and city hall freed from graft-ers ought to wear a John A. Coulthurst button.

The button does not cost anyone anything. It is given free at the Independence League headquarters, No. 548 Old South Building.

COVENY SCORES CAMBRIDGE GRAFT

John W. Coveny, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Mayor of Cambridge, last night charged at a rally held in his interests in that city last night, his record the chief of police and the chief of the fire department and other officials.

James T. Barrett, who presided created a good deal of enthusiasm by his denunciation of machine politicians. He said that Mayor Walter C. Wardwell was the tool of a political ring.

When Coveny was concluded he congratulated James F. Ahearn, the worker for the Democratic nomination for mayor of Cambridge.

If I become Mayor, said Coveny, I will not allow the city of Boston to pass policemen act as soldiers for the Boston road and watch men who are working for $2.25 a day. If I am elected I will not allow a policeman to keep a man for paying a poll tax. I will turn Police Court into a house of correction. I will have some one besides a school teacher for chief of police to show Cambridge the difference between Hurlburt and Brownell. I will be honest and fair to all in the Democratic party and will not play favorites. I will see that the children are now big business and the city is depositing city money in a bank which he is interested in and I will have it given to a church firm that is getting $17,000 without a public bid."

LEAGUERS ROUSED IN CAMBRIDGE

Talk of Trick to Steal Nomination for Mayor Stirs Citizens.

Talk of such a raid on the Independence League in Cambridge as was contemplated in Boston until the press of the city exposed the scheme, has aroused the Leaguers of the University City to the full importance of next Tuesday's primaries.

Aaron M. Richards, who has been indorsed for Mayor by the Leaguers, is president of the Independence League in Cambridge.

"If the 2,296 men who voted here for Thomas H. Sullivan for governor vote a straight ticket," Mr. Richards said last night, "we are sure of the Sunday Arm-ain, there would be no question about the outcome. But I'm not going to wait until next year to commence campaign work."

Talking on the raid is expected to result in a legal investigation, as it did in Boston.

"We will have a red hot campaign, too," says Mr. Richards.

SANTO DOMINGO CANNOT PLACE LOAN

Washington, Nov. 16.—Santo Domingo has been cut in the financial stringency. The republic is unable to place the $20,000,000 loan by which it was to carry out its terms of the treaty with the United States for the settlement of its outstanding foreign debts.

Pays Mother's Tribute to Candidate for Mayor

ONE OF THE BEST SONS EVER MOTHER HAD; TRUE AND BRAVE

—MRS. COULTHURST.

"If All Knew Him as We Do, He Would Be Chosen Mayor," Says Mother in Tribute to League Candidate.

"IF everybody knew John as we know him here at home," said Mrs. Coulthurst, "there wouldn't have to be any voting. He would be the next Mayor of Boston.

"John is the best son in the world and I am proud of him. But I don't know much about politics. I don't understand these things, and I am afraid of reporters. I might say something [illegible]

And Mrs. Coulthurst laughed, a mother's motherly laugh, which instantly won a vote from the interviewer in favor of the mayoralty candidate. Tell the people of Boston what you think of your son, I suggested.

Mrs. Coulthurst looked at me a moment, then she said: "John is the best son a mother ever had. He is honest, and that is the best thing I can say about him. If he is elected Mayor [illegible] and you will see everything straight. I shall go to the door there with joy in my heart and open it for the next Mayor.

"I think I know—that I should like to give my son that welcome—but I guess I'd better not say any more."

"An Old-Fashioned Mother"

"John is Mrs. Coulthurst said there was a little more than a year between [illegible] and myself. I suppose she noticed me looking at the pictures of her children, for she said: "John was born in Pawtucket, R. I., where we lived for a little more than a year. "I [illegible] honest, and that it is [illegible] all [illegible] qualities, [illegible] and you [illegible] everything [illegible] shall go to the door there with joy in my heart and open it for the next Mayor.

"I think I know—that I should like to give my son that welcome—but I guess I'd better not say any more."

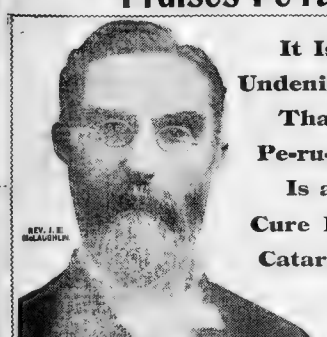
Rev. J. B. McLaughlin Praises Pe-ru-na



It Is Undeniable That Pe-ru-na Is a Cure For Catarrh.

Rev. J. B. McLaughlin, 416 6th St., N. W., Washington, D. C., formerly city missionary of Little Rock, Ark., now an attorney residing in Washington, writes:

"Catarrhal complaint in all its various forms is so general that the public should be informed of a remedy for the same. It is undeniable that Peruna is a cure for that disease. My knowledge of it beneficial use I have no hesitation in giving it my earnest [illegible] and recommendation."

Nervous, No Appetite.

Mr. Lewis W. Zins, editor and proprietor of The St. Augustine Meteor, St. Augustine, Fla., writes:

"Any man in public work finds at times that he is under a peculiar nervous strain. I found with it I lost my appetite and my brain seemed to work unceasingly during sleeping hours, so I was tired and worn out in the morning.

"Nothing was of benefit to me but Peruna. It is certainly a remarkable medicine. I was restored in three weeks to my normal healthy condition.

Pe-ru-na in Tablet Form.

For two years Dr. Hartman and his assistants have incessantly labored to create Peruna in tablet form and then experiments have just been crowned with success. People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna tablets. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

THIS LITTLE LADY OF THE STAGE DOESN'T ASPIRE TO BECOME OPERA STAR

SMALL BOSTON MAID WINS STAGE HONORS

Too Tiny to Be a Star, She Says, but Is Charming as Soubrette.

NOW APPEARING IN HUB

Miss Katherine Daly will no doubt be at No. 4 Grimes street, South Boston, this little lady of the stage who doesn't aspire to be a leading woman yet has her own unique reasons for it. When she left the Dorothea Dix house where she was trained they predicted a great future for her. Although only seventeen years of age, she has already made her mark in several productions

"No, I do not aspire to be a leading lady," said Miss Daly in telling where the question was put to her. "Why? Well, I'll tell you frankly. I am not tall enough in the first place, and in the second place I would never do to assume the leading role naturally.

Now With Lulu Glaser

"But it is my ambition to make myself a good comic opera soubrette. I think I know my limitations. I want to do what I can naturally, and I don't learn to dance as well as some girls in the world does. I will be a comedienne.

Miss Daly is at present playing with Lulu Glaser in "Lady from Brighton." At the Dolly theatre she was a great favorite with the other members of the company.

She never took a dancing or a singing lesson. Both accomplishments came to her naturally.

Early Took Child Parts.

She was one of the most prominent in the Dorothea Dix theatricals and one was named child parts in such plays as "Humanity" and "Lost Paradise."

She was also for a time in Lottie Blair Parker's "Under Two Flags," and Hoyt's "A Parlor Match." Miss Daly, the little Boston girl was given an important part, who has a fine soprano voice and by present position has done much to bring out her natural talent.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR WOMAN'S HOTEL

Mrs Charlotte Smith Sanguine of Success of Her Plan to Aid Working Girls.

There will be a meeting of the Boston Women's Board of Trade Monday night at 6 o'clock in Room 60 at No. 501 Washington street when steps will be taken to start the work of securing funds for the women's hotel so ably advocated by Mrs. Charlotte Smith.

All details of the project being successful has been accomplished and Mrs. Smith stated yesterday to a Boston Sunday American reporter that plenty of money would be forthcoming for the building of the hotel.

"I have received many assurances of financial support," said Mrs. Smith, "Many of these, besides being in favor of a hotel, will also subscribe to the fund in a substantial way. It will not be a charity institution, but will be run on a business basis. But the business will receive a small rate of money.

It seems to me that all the business men of Boston should be interested in the wild women fad which many stories will come to life on when they are more of suitable size to entertain. The plans to be a powerful person who the hotel should be built. Then the whole city will be better protected and it would be less danger of women's rights.

At the present time there are many women who would be interested in the proposed hotel, and the organization of another meeting in the week also points to the fact that her efforts will be crowned with success.

Thanksgiving Day Joy Is Marred by the Increase of 30 to 40 Per Cent. on All the Customary Dainties

HIGH PRICES RULE AS HOLIDAY NEARS

Turkeys and All Other Foodstuffs Command Forbidding Figures This Year.

With Thanksgiving almost here, the problem of providing the usual dainty fare presents a serious problem to the average wage-earner with a number of hungry months to feed.

The turkey gobbler, as if in anticipation of the great and ever increasing demand that he offer himself up as a sacrifice, has made himself exceedingly scarce. The price for these delicious birds is all ready quoted at from 30 to 35 cents a pound, and the toothsome Vermont birds will bring as high as 40 cents, or even more.

Victims of Strange Malady.

A strange and fatal malady has appeared among the flocks of birds fattening in Vermont for the holiday trade, and the steady decrease in the quantity of Green Mountain turkeys shipped out of the State in the past five years is even more in evidence this Fall. The farmers declare that the raising of the birds has now become so uncertain as to be unprofitable at present prices.

Not only turkey, but every kind of meat and other goodies making a spread for festive board at Thanksgiving are soaring this year at almost unheard of prices. It costs from $25 to $50 per cent. more to provide a Thanksgiving dinner than it did ten years ago, by reason of the increased demand for foodstuffs.

An annual feature of the day of thanks and feasting in the nation is the shipment by Harry Vose, of Westerly, R. I., of a thirty-five-pound bird of his own raising to the President. Mr. Vose has supplied the White House table for many years by "unwritten law," and this month he has two immense turk's fattened. Both will be killed and dressed, and, early next week, the more perfect of the brace will be shipped to Theodore Roosevelt at Washington. Mr. Vose says that the poultry in Rhode Island are much more plenty this year than in Vermont, which will help the Boston market some.

No Snow in Prospect.

Time was when he had sleighing Thanksgiving Day in Old New England, but when such a thing as snow is mentioned this year, the westerman just smiles and shakes his head.

With the youngsters, Thanksgiving with all its feasting and frolicking is a second Christmas—only it comes first—and as compared with those of ten years ago. It is as follows.

BUSINESS MEN FORM COULTHURST CLUB

Twenty Leading Citizens Plan Non-Partisan Committee to Support Him.

Headed by Charles J. Martel of Dorchester, a Barristers' Hall attorney, who is also a member of the executive committee of the Democratic city Club of New England, twenty professional and business men of Boston p in the formation of a Coulthurst non-partisan committee.

Mr. Martel is not a politician. Years of personal acquaintance with John A. Coulthurst, Independence League nominee for Mayor, have convinced Mr. Martel and his associates, however, that Mr. Coulthurst comes nearer than any other Democrat, or Hibbard, Republican, to meeting Boston's great need.

Better Than Others.

A graduate of Boston College in the class of '93—Coulthurst's class—Mr Martel speaks of the candidate as one who knows him. Mr. Martel is a member of the City Club. He resides with his family at No. 27 Pierce street, Dorchester.

Talking about the Coulthurst Non-Partisan Committee last night, Mr. Martel said:

"I am a personal friend of Mr. Coulthurst, and I regard him as an honest and upright man who will fill the Mayor's chair with honor to himself and all the citizens better than any other candidate before the public at present. His fitness of character and integrity are predominant and I shall do all in my power to assist him to become the next Mayor of Boston, which I believe he will when the attention of the voters is called to his qualifications.

Laud His Integrity.

"I went through Boston College with him, and it was when I first became a reading citizen that I met him," continued Mr. Martel, "Ever since—fifteen years—we have been personal friends, and I have always been an admirer of his integrity and ability. We are both members of the Boston City Club and the Georgetown Law Society Club of New England.

"The present movement to form a non partisan citizens' committee to favor Mr. Coulthurst, of which I, perhaps, am one of the leaders, started by a meeting of a few friends, prominent in both these political parties. It will be known as the Coulthurst Non-Partisan Committee and its organization will be perfected at a meeting to be held in my office here in Barrister's Hall, probably next Monday night. The names of the leaders will be made public.

"We will secure headquarters at once and begin an active campaign in his behalf. News of the movement has already been received about, and we have many intimations from prominent people in both the Republican and Democratic parties and from men who have never before taken active interest in politics that they will co-operate with us as soon as the organization is perfected.

Plan Active Work.

"After the organization of the Citizens' Committee we will take every legitimate step to promote Mr. Coulthurst's candidacy as a Non-Partisan.

"We will try to reach the best possible element among the voters throughout the entire city, particularly in the residential circle reformers, and to organize the efforts of these in one grand movement—the election of Mr. Coulthurst."

SEEK 3-CENT CAR FARE FOR LABOR

Worcester, Nov. 16.—Oscar E. Edstedt, No. 60 Greenwood street, has started a campaign among the laboring people of the city for a three-cent street car fare. He is circulating petitions, urging that the members of the City Council be compelled to secure the so-called "half-fare" tickets for 1½ cents of the laboring people between 7 and 8 a. m., 12 to 2 p. m. and 5 to 7.30 p. m. every working day.

Mayor John T. Duggan has promised to help the project in every way possible.

MORAN SILENT IN FIGHT FOR MAYOR

Just what District Attorney John B. Moran will do and just what is his general attitude in the Mayoralty campaign is exciting keenest anxiety among the supporters of Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, but to date they are unable to penetrate his purpose.

Just before the State election John B. Moran gave public warning to Mayor Fitzgerald to keep his hands off or they would presently be mixed into a political combat that would end in the political finish of one of them.

The Mayor's friends are now feverish in their desire to show that the Mayor complied with the suggestion and kept out of the contest and that this accounts in a measure for Moran's big vote and Ivenison's small vote.

There is growing expectation that the District Attorney will take a positive stand and do something startling at the Mayor's instant. Questioned on this point last evening Mr. Moran was non-committal, making the following statement:

"I am attending to my duties as district attorney, and the office keeps me busy.

"I have not told anybody what my position is regarding the Mayoralty fight. What I may do is something I cannot now say."

...AND OF FAIR NATALIE SCHENCK NOW A POTTER

SPURNED BY FETED BEAUTY

DETERMINED TO SUCCEED

Shunned and Cast Off by the "Smart Set," Who Dazzled Him at Newport.

DRESSED as a laborer, shoveling coarse clay into the hopper for hours at a time for a pittance of a wage, Captain Charles Glen Collins, once a British Captain under Lord Kitchener in the Soudan, a dashing officer in the crack Highland Regiment, "The Black Watch," in the Boer War, wounded in the Battle of Paardeberg, and later the proud husband of beautiful Natalie Schenck of New York and New York, toils now as a "hand" in the South Boston works of the Grueby Faience Pottery Company.

To-day this petted and spoiled son of a famous Scotch family, who was divorced by the proud and disappointed society belle, because he did not have the fortune she had thought he had, is humbly beginning life all over again.

Why? Who knows but the love for his pretty and accomplished wife, the feted beauty of the richest and smartest "set" in America, still lingers in the heart of Collins? Who knows that he is set proving himself a man for the sake of "Bunny George," their pretty three-year-old boy? But, most of all, this young Scotchman, through whose veins courses brave Scotch fighting blood, is making himself a man again for his own self-respect.

Disowned by his ex-petty family of Skeelmorrie, in Ayrshire, Scotland, after he had sowed more wild oats than most young men, his marriage with the beautiful, yet fortuneless, American girl was still another cross on the family escutcheon. He determined to come again to the land of free and plain men and make for himself a new life, one of honest toil and thrift.

Here he has splendid, and with it that grim, dry humor so characteristic of the Scots. As he labored with sick and weary the other day at a clay bank he said to a fellow-toiler, "What time I shoveled clay was in the entrenchments before a battle."

Tireless, faithful and so strong that he lifts easily a hundred-pound "wagon" in the kiln-room, this former British captain has attracted the eye of his employers. Yet he tells on as though born to the lowly task.

Chapter I.
Soldier of Fortune.

Born in the rugged mountains of Scotland, Charles Glen Collins lived the life of a healthy highlander until he went to Cheltenham Military College from which he was graduated with honor and won a commissioned officer in the British army and the famous "Black Watch" at seventeen.

Through the Soudan campaign he served under the Sirdar, and when the Boers fought Queen Victoria's soldiers, Collins was in the forefront, sailing himself to fame by rare bravery. In the bloody battle of Magersfontein he was one of the six survivors of his company. He was wounded at the fight at Paardeberg.

Invalided home, honorably mentioned by the youth was made a staff officer in Kitchener's Fighting Scouts, with rank of captain. At the coronation of King Edward Collins was a conspicuous figure.

Prospered and toasted, the wounded young Collins's head was turned. He became a great sport and soon spent and loaned with his money away at London, Paris and Monte Carlo until all but wrecked, with $17,000, which he had raised somehow, he came to America to try his fortune.

Chapter II.
Society's Dazzling Beauty.

Natalie Schenck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Spottsford D. Schenck, granddaughter of Matthew Morgan and niece of Edward D. Morgan, with Dr. Nosh Hunt, the famous clergyman, another relative, had everything that fortune is favor socially. Alas, she had but little of that!

Nevertheless, her debut in the Summer [illegible] was a very grand affair and she [illegible] to none for was she not the bosom friend of [illegible] Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt and Mrs. Irving Gould and hosts of the [illegible] prominent?

So the pretty debutante had the world [illegible] at her feet from the hour of her [illegible] launched that April [illegible] society, signed that very best people [illegible] Natalie Schenck, Natalie Schenck and Cynthia Hoyle" called by and when Know them as the [illegible] and originally [illegible] deserved the name. Where one was there the others were also. And for [illegible] denial! Well, that Summer of 1903 was [illegible] Newport. And [illegible] the [illegible] Newport [illegible] for the fair [illegible] pretty bride fairly took the place by storm.

With her splendid blonde hair [illegible] below her slender waist from [illegible] head, Natalie set a new style, as she raced along the sands with white swirls of the breakers curling [illegible] her feet. In [illegible] bathing suit, daringly low [illegible] with rows of [illegible] the daring girl again took the breath of rated society.

And suitors? Yes, the beautiful blonde

MISS GLADYS FINDS COUNT HAS TEMPER

Hungarian Nobleman and Fiancee Quarrel Over Trivial Matters.

Newport, R. I., Nov. 16.—Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, much to the secret delight of many of the members of her family, is finding that Count Laszlo Szechenyi is not altogether blest Hungarian nobleman though he is. In fact, intolerably with the noble Count is all but breeding unfittings, for at times the victorious fortune hunter has dropped the mask and he has shown a nature far from [illegible]

Newport and New York [illegible] with the tales of how the [illegible] is showing himself at times to have a disposition not far from churlish.

Gets Angry On Drive.

Everyone recalls the [illegible] which Gladys and Count Laszlo had the other day, when he got so very angry with his self-willed little bride to be [illegible] ily jumped out of her little [illegible] cart and scolded him, nothing by himself, all because she would not allow him to drive.

Another recent incident, which shows which way the wind [illegible] and indicates that Gladys' love affairs [illegible] is far from being all lovely and pleasant, was when they all came down here from New York on the Fall River line boat.

Gladys had had trouble in having her pretty white spaniel, "Dinky," housed on the bad steamer. While she was arranging to get a whole stateroom for the little fellow, just to keep him from being checked and shoved into the baggage room, Count Szechenyi sulked because he was inconvenienced for the dog.

He didn't take kindly at all to the situation and it required [illegible] for Gladys, Comedian and Miss Gladys, and the next morning he was going and "cross as a bear."

Gladys pretends not to notice these things, but her friends know that she does and that more than once "her foreigner" has caused her to be ashamed of him.

The haughty American heiress is too proud to seem intimate just who may have been involved, but her friends, who are still opposing the match, quietly take the greatest delight with these pre-nuptial breaks on the part of the Count, and are devoutly praying that he may get mad enough some day to cause Gladys to "throw him over."

Going to the Horse Show.

Meantime preparations for the wedding, which it is now said, will not take place [illegible] are going [illegible] on. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt is [illegible] for Mrs. Szechenyi and [illegible] the Grosvenor House [illegible] and she is having her troubles keeping the [illegible] "good" and Gladys away from the influence of the other Vanderbilts.

Mrs. Cornelius has arranged that she, Gladys and Count Szechenyi, the [illegible] Carlisle, are all to go to the Horse Show in New York next week. A part of the [illegible] that same night, Fifty-fifth street, is to be kept open for them. They are to stay there for several days and in that time a great show of family reconciliation is to be made by visits back and forth.

The Breakers, Mrs. Vanderbilt's cottage here, is to be kept open all Winter, [illegible] trunks filled with brief gowns and traveling costumes are [illegible] to the residence, and, if the Count does not become "impossible," the chances are that Gladys will wear them all when she becomes a real live Countess.

CRIMSON MAKES A SORRY SHOWING IN BATTLE WITH GREEN

Two Blocked Kicks, a Long Run and Glaze's Field Goal Win for Dartmouth.

NO SCORE IN 1ST HALF; 28,000 SPECTATORS THERE

By Warren B. Davis.

DARTMOUTH College, even down to the class of '46, came to the Stadium yesterday afternoon with a band, a squeal that was distressingly painful to Crimson ears, many rolls of green tape and huge packages of enthusiasm.

The score was Dartmouth, 22; Harvard, 0.

The Crimson had prepared for a hard battle. From Hanover, N. H., there had come the report that the eleven which would represent the Green was one that could be relied upon to push itself to the limit. Harvard expected to win, but by a small score. The result was disheartening, even to the most sanguine supporters.

In the first few minutes of play it looked as though Harvard was to make amends many times for the defeat of a week ago, when the Indians secured a pretty victory. Hopes were raised in those few minutes. The ball was worked nearer and nearer the Green's goal, and it seemed as though a score for the Crimson was inevitable.

Glaze Proves an Obstacle.

Newhall had dashed through the whole Dartmouth team. Only Johnny Glaze stood in his way and Glaze saved the goal. The play continued in Dartmouth's territory, Harvard's hopes were lowered, even though the Green's line could not be passed.

Then came the series of disasters that took from Harvard, beat out of the Harvard eleven and made them an easy mark for hordes of the agile men from Hanover. Bird, catching an onside kick from Wendell, slipped and [illegible] down. Otherwise he ought to have scored.

But they still fought. Within ten yards of Dartmouth's goal a forward pass was missed by Bird. Johnny Glaze was there again and fell on the ball. Marks kicked, the ball temporarily out of the danger line.

Harvard resumed to the attack with a vigor that cheered her supporters. The ball was pressed forward. It got to within ten yards of the Dartmouth line.

"If Harvard can keep that up they'll

With the Score 10 to 0 Against Her the Eli Bulldogs Win a Great Victory.

COY'S GREAT PLAYING WILL MAKE HIM CAPTAIN

By H. M. Sedgwick.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 16.—Shattered and demoralized, Yale turned apparent and dismal defeat into glorious victory over Princeton today by the narrow margin of 12 to 10. Trailing the dashing Tigers 10 to 0 when the first half closed, Yale's rally for the first fifteen minutes of the second half tore the Tiger rush line into tatters or huddling it into a compact mass to meet an expected attack, left it stalled while Yale's sprinting ground gainers, Coy and Tad Jones, galloped half the length of the field.

Coy outshines his fellow players as easily the star of the game, his punting easily eclipsing that of Harlan; his end runs shining out like beacon lights on a rock bound and fog beclouded coast and his line plunging plunging the Tiger ranks till two touchdowns, both by Coy himself, had been recorded. By Coy's grand work he today earned a Yale captaincy. Although only a sophomore he will next year lead the Elis.

Tad Jones the Goods.

A close second to Coy in the grand rally of the second half came Tad Jones. Three times his quarterback runs dropped the tackling averages of the famous Princeton ends.

Stampeding Yale's unscored eleven Princeton crossed the Yale goal within fifteen minutes after play began on Booth's lash after gobbling a blocked kick. Her [illegible] field goal from the twenty-five-yard line before the first half closed the Tigers' scoring. Coy put two touchdowns in the next fifteen minutes of the second half. Tied to the mast, saving Yale bowed [illegible]

A great crowd saw the game, not quite so large as that which witnessed the struggle a week ago with the Indians, but still a big crowd. Dartmouth was represented by the strongest aggregation that ever came to Boston for a football game. They marched onto the field with a band. Those who came from nearby [illegible] seemed to have secured all the automobiles that were not in use for business purposes.

OFFICIAL FIGURES PUT LEAGUE SECOND

Returns From 126 Cities and Towns Show New Party Defeated Democracy.

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE
75,026
(Thomas L. Hisgen's Vote)
DEMOCRATIC PARTY
73,961
(Highest Claims)

The belated official announcement of the Whitney vote in Boston strengthens the belief of Independence Leaguers that their party has become "one of the two leading political parties" in Massachusetts, and, as such, is entitled to an even half of all the 6,000 election officers in the State.

Mr. Whitney's total vote in Boston, according to the official compilation, was 28,832.

The Boston DEMOCRATIC vote, however, was only 22,008. Mr. Whitney got 3,824 of his votes on his "triple lines" as "Democratic Citizens" and "Independent Citizens."

Thomas L. Hisgen, candidate of the Independence League, got a total vote in Boston of 18,305.

Official Figures.

With the Boston figures at hand it is tally is now complete from 126 cities and towns. These are the official figures:

	WHITNEY Dem.	HISGEN WHITNEY Ind. League	Other Democ.
Previously Reported	75,328	40,308	6,871
Boston	22,008	18,305	3,824
Totals	97,336	58,301	10,695

Prominent members of the League said last night that they have no doubt whatever that the Whitney Democratic vote was swiped in like manner throughout the State.

League Surely Second.

They pointed out that the total Whitney vote was 84,102. Granting, they said, that every vote in the towns not yet officially heard from went to Whitney as a Democrat—which is impossible—his vote as a Democrat was 97,961.

This was the Democratic vote in the State, if every Whitney vote but yet heard from was counted [illegible]

The Independence League claimed [illegible] by [illegible] and the election of [illegible] leading political parties in Massachusetts.

SULTAN SHOWS NO MERCY.

Constantinople, Nov. 16.—Court circles have been startled by the drastic measures adopted by the sultan in dealing with his former favorite Djelish-Eddin Pasha, who he ordered to express views as to the desirability of a constitution for the Turkish empire. Djelish-Eddin was stripped of his rank and title and only the fact that he succeeded in leaving Turkey [illegible] saved his head [illegible]

THOUSANDS OF VOTES GIVEN TO MAYOR BY MISCOUNT?

Several Precinct Figures Show All Before Credited to Fitzgerald.

ORDER VOTES RECOUNTED

Strange Situation Now Revealed by Close Study of Caucus Vote.

'EXPLANATION IS REFUTED'

No Blanks Cast in Disputed Districts? Absurd," Says Election Official.

THAT Mayor Fitzgerald was credited with [illegible] erratic votes in Thursday's city primary which he never received, was the statement made by an official of the election department last night.

This official based his statement on a study of [illegible] many precincts in all parts of the city the Democratic vote for Mayor was not counted at all, the precinct officers simply crediting Mayor Fitzgerald with all the ballots cast, not allowing for any blanks or for any votes for John A. Coulthurst and other names which were written on the ballots.

The practice is an old one worked in many primaries elections where there have been no contests on.

Secretary Herman Hormel of the Republican City Committee stated last night that he received several calls at headquarters over the telephone Thursday afternoon from watchers, who told him that the Democratic vote for Mayor was not being counted and inquiring if the practice was all right in view of the fact that there was an contest. Mr. Hormel told the callers made the reply, he says, that the Democratic vote should be counted, and that it was wrong to credit the Mayor with the entire vote cast without counting it.

Figures Tell the Story.

As an indication of what was done in several precincts, the election officials referred to above showed the City Hall records for last night, the tabulations of several [illegible] where it was clear that Mayor Fitzgerald [illegible] with a vote in those [illegible] to receive the entire number of votes cast for Mayor. That there were no votes for Mayor [illegible] precincts was proved by the fact that Mayor Fitzgerald for Mayor was accredited [illegible]

A few samples of the way the ballots were not counted are shown in these figures:

In Ward 2, Precinct 2, entire number of ballots cast, 147, votes credited to Fitzgerald, 147. In Ward 3, Precinct 2, no one cast, 223; credited to Fitzgerald, 223. Ward 4, Precinct 1, ballots cast, 246; credited to Fitzgerald, 246. Ward 4, Precinct 2, ballots cast, 206, credited to Fitzgerald, 206. Ward 11, Precinct 1, ballots cast, 290; credited to Fitzgerald, 290. Ward 11, Precinct 2, ballots cast, 261; credited to Fitzgerald, 261. Ward 14, Precinct 1, ballots cast, 268; credited to Fitzgerald, 268. Ward 14, Precinct 2, ballots cast, 206; credited to Fitzgerald, 206. Ward 20, Precinct 2, ballots cast, 206; credited to Fitzgerald, 206. Ward 21, Precinct 3, ballots cast, 123; credited to Fitzgerald, 123. Ward 22, Precinct 1, ballots cast, 156; credited to Fitzgerald, [illegible].

Recount Vote To-morrow.

A study of the precinct tabulations by the election officers, based on the above figures as a sample of what was done, leads to the deduction that Mayor Fitzgerald received less than fifty per cent. of the total [illegible] cast on Thursday, instead of the 90 per cent. which the returns gave him. The Mayor's total on the face of the returns was [illegible] out of a total Democratic vote of 30,000.

Declaring that Mayor Fitzgerald could not have received the Democratic vote in his old home, Ward Six, whereas the returns gave him but 1296, Alfred Seligman, brother of the late Representative George [illegible] filed a petition yesterday afternoon for the recount of the Mayoralty vote cast in this ward. The recounting of this vote and all other recounts petitioned for will begin in Faneuil Hall at 10 to-morrow morning. No recount of the [illegible] vote has been asked for [illegible] Ward Six.

Mr. [illegible] stated last night that [illegible] precincts in Ward 6, to [illegible] Avenue between Wards 5 and 8, where the Democratic vote for Mayor was not counted.

Refute Mayor's Explanation.

As a refutation of Mayor Fitzgerald's explanation of his extremely small vote for Mayor, that it was due wholly to the fact that many voters, desiring to vote last night pointed to the vote for street commissioner, and for no other candidates, the tabulation of which was finished yesterday. Despite the fact that Alderman Charles M. Draper has been repudiated by the local Democratic organization and by the Republican press, he received as an unopposed candidate for the Republican nomination for street commission, eighty per cent. of the votes cast in Ward 6.

As an unopposed candidate for Mayor, John F. Fitzgerald, despite the fact that his name led the Democratic ballot, where it was [illegible] received only [illegible] per cent. of the votes cast in Ward 6, according to the returns, and probable much less, according to the discoveries made yesterday.

POPE STOPS ITALIAN MONOPOLY ON NUNCIOS

Rome, Nov. 16.—Pope Pius X. will appoint others than Italians as papal nuncios hereafter. He recently appointed a German as nuncio to Munich and is appointing men as nuncios to other countries he will, so far as he is able, choose a representative of the country to which the nuncio is sent. In the College of Cardinals it is understood that this new policy has been suggested by Merry del Val, papal secretary of state, who is himself a Spaniard.

NAME FLOWER FOR ETHEL ROOSEVELT

Agricultural Department Pays Homage to Her and to Miss Edith Root.

YOUNG WOMEN ARE RIVALS

There is an Ethel Roosevelt chrysanthemum.

It was discovered yesterday at an exhibition held by the Agricultural Department at Washington.

Immediately after the discovery that a new growth of the gorgeous flower had been named for the daughter of the President, who is at the present time the most sought after young woman in Washington, diplomats and others made excursions to the Agricultural Department to have a look.

They saw the "Ethel Roosevelt" chrysanthemum, admired it in diplomatic fashion thought it was the finest specimen of its kind they had ever seen, and were about to go away, when their attention was called to another of the same species.

That was labelled the "Edith Root chrysanthemum.

Miss Edith Root is the daughter of Elihu Root, Secretary of State. Among diplomats it is thought to be the proper thing at all times to be able to say nice things about the Secretary of State and his family.

Therefore all the diplomats had to go back and look again at the display and particularly admire the Edith Root chrysanthemum, which, they promptly agreed was second only in beauty to the Ethel Roosevelt chrysanthemum.

It was brought about by the display that these two charming Washington young women are rivals for first place in the chrysanthemum display. It is said among those who know the inside of the story that the Ethel Roosevelt has some slight advantage over the Edith Root chrysanthemum, but no one is talking for publication. It is a delicate diplomatic situation.

Ethel Roosevelt is daring and ambitious She is anxious to take the place formerly occupied by her sister, now Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, in Washington society. A comely she has made a name for herself by her daring as an automobilist. She has had some large portion of the diplomatic colony at her feet.

Likewise, Miss Edith Root is ambitious and it is foreseen in Washington that there is apt to be rivalry between the two The matter of the chrysanthemums has aroused the greatest interest

Appetite—None

The Woeful Reflections of a Withered Dyspeptic.

No substitute for good nature has yet been found. Smiles take root in the stomach. Without good digestion there never can be very much sunshine, for the very simple reason that the stomach and the brain are twins, and what affects one invariably affects the other. The advice that the best road to a person's heart is via the stomach, still holds good.

in a variety of ways—belching, burning sensation, an empty feeling in the stomach, bloating after eating, brash, aversion to food, fermentation, or downright indigestion.

There are few diseases which create such misery—long drawn out misery —as dyspepsia. It pursues you before meals, after meals, and between meals; you take it to bed with you; it is with you at the theatre and at your desk.

What is the only way to get rid of it?

You don't have to stop eating, you don't have to diet. Just take something that will do the work of the stomach and let the stomach take a rest.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the most wonderful little tablets on earth for this very thing

In plain arithmetic, 1 of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets—1 good strong stomach for 1 time for 1 good hearty meal. One ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest perfectly 3,000 grains of food in just the same way that a strong, robust, healthy stomach would do it.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets enrich and increase the gastric juice in your stomach, and that is mostly what you need—more and better gastric juice

And it gives the stomach a rest, a good long rest. In the meantime it cures those dyspepsia, and all other stomach troubles.

Just a few of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will prove to you what these little cherubs of health and happiness can do

MILKMEN TO INVADE HUB WITHIN MONTH

Farmers Plan to War on Contractors for Boston Retail Trade.

Within one month the farmers of Worcester County will have an independent milk company serving milk in the city of Boston.

The farmers will also proceed immediately to work for the removal of Dr Charles E. Harrington, secretary of the State Board of Health

They will demand reform milk legislation at the next session of the Legislature

The new company will have a capital of at least $50,000 and its mission will be to reduce the cost to consumers of milk now paid by the dealers of Boston at their ranch.

Cheaper milk to the public and more profit to the farmers is the slogan of the new independent company.

The Milk Producers' committee of sixteen, at Worcester the night appointed a sub-committee of five to draft the constitution and by-laws of the new anti-trust milk company. This committee was directed to report within two days. The members of the committee declare that all, or nearly all of the capital to carry on the independent enterprises will be supplied by the farmers of Worcester County and they will divide the profits

Aim to Cut Out Middlemen.

The aim of the producers is to cut out the middleman's profit, now very large, because the milk contractors' combination has the Boston market under complete control. The committee declares that the public will not have to pay so much for its milk and the farmer will get more for his supply.

The appeal for the removal of Dr. Harrington from the State Department of Health, will be filed with Attorney General Dana Measie. According to members of the committee of sixteen, the Attorney General will be petitioned to oust the head of the health department. The committee declares that his presence in office is inimical to the interests of the farmers.

The legislation which will be sought will not be for the lowering of the standard of milk, so far as its purity is concerned The committee of sixteen declared, last night that the purpose was merely to get a standard which would put the farmers of Massachusetts on an equal basis with those of other States, who are disposing of their milk in Boston to the disadvantage of the Massachusetts farmer

Committee of Sixteen.

The committee of sixteen consists of D. W. Potter, Worcester George Aldrich, Leominster; Jonas Brooks, Lunenburg; George E. Moore, Hubbardston; E. A. Conner, Worcester; Luther Crafts, New Braintree; Frank Bartlett, Sterling; Sidney L. Burr, Boston; Sumner Reed, Brookfield; Walter D. Moore, Brookfield; Elwin F. Hunt, Barre; C. H. Walcott, Barre; J. C. Prouty, Princeton; Theodore Bates, Sterling; F. P. Johnson, Southboro; Charles Wood, Worcester. The executive committee for the organization of the company consists of D. W. Potter, Worcester; C. H. Hale, H. W. Potter, Sidney L. Burr and Sumner Reed.

Thomas W. Lawson, who offered to furnish cars for the farmers if they would compete, will be offered some stock in the company, but nothing more. The committee agreed last night that they could raise enough money from farmers and others to destroy of selling stock to outsiders in any quantity

TO TELL OF WALL STREET METHODS

Bartholomew F. Griffin of the Boston News Bureau will give a smoker talk before the members of Division 76, A. O. H., at the regular meeting this afternoon in Central Hall, Central street, Dorchester. His subject will be "Wall Street and Its Methods." Previous to the talk, arrangements will be made for the rounding up social dancing party of the division to be held November 23 in Walton Hall.

ONE MAN BARS PATH TO POLICE ADVANCE

Stands on His Rights Under Law and Blocks Promotions to Captain.

FOUR POSITIONS VACANT

Lieutenant Driscoll Refuses to Waive Veteran's Preference to Aid O'Meara's Plans.

Because of th stact that one man stands squarely on his rights under the laws of the State and insists taht if anyone receives promotion he shall be the man, the police department is lacking four captains of divisions.

This man is Lieutenant James F. Driscoll of the Brighton station. Lieutenant Driscoll is a veteran of the civil war, and under the application of the Veterans' Preference Act he is entitled to promotion to captain whenever a vacancy shall occur Lieutenant Driscol is the only officer of that rank in the department who is a veteran.

There are now four vacancies in the rank of captain in the department, positions that are being filled by lieutenants with the rank of acting captains. It is the first time that such a number of like positions have been vacant.

Because of the Veterans' Preference Act also no captain will be named at present to succeed the late Deputy Superintendent Herbert M. Hanscom. Should appointment be made to-morrow, Mr. O'Meara could select only one of three men, Captain George W. Westcott of the Jamaica Plain station, Captain Clarence A. Swan of the City Prison, or Captain William J. Towery, of the City Point Station.

Commissioner O'Meara has designated with the advice of Superintendent Peters, Lieutenant Cleary of Division 6 of the Back Bay district, to assume charge of the force Tonight at Police Headquarters.

Driscoll Stands His Ground.

Until the death of Inspector William Burke, there were two aspirants for captaincies. Inspector Burke announced Quinlan as willing to waive his rights to promotion under the act on condition that Lieutenant Driscol should do the same. Lieutenant Driscoll, however, refused to be set aside and insisted that, if promotions were made, he should be given every advantage under the law

Commissioner O'Meara does not want to give one of the vacancies to Lieutenant Driscoll because he feels that that officer has obtained advantage enough, having been promoted twice within a few years, owing to the law that gave him preference over other candidates.

Despite the fact that four divisions have been in command of lieutenants for several months, Commissioner O'Meara has held off in the promotions in the hope that there might be some compromise in the matter. But the fact is put squarely to him that if he makes any promotions he must promote Lieutenant Driscoll first.

The vacancies are, Dedham Street Station, Lieutenant Daniel A. Ritter, acting captain, filling the vacancy caused by the death of Captain John T. O'Leary. Broadway Station, Lieutenant Forrest F. Hall, filling the vacancy caused by the transfer of Captain Weswott to Jamaica Plain when Captain Philip McBrine died. East Boston station, Lieutenant George D. Yeaton, acting captain because of the transfer of Captain Thomas C. Evans, who went to the Dudley Street Station on the death of Captain Daniel E. Curran; the harbor police, where Lieutenant Edward A. Pease is acting captain, filling the vacancy created by Captain Ithamer A. Mercer's death

O'Meara Believes in Young Men.

Commissioner O'Meara is a believer in young men for positions of responsibility and he does not like to advance men of years on the sole claim that they are veterans.

The advantage of being promoted from lieutenant to captain is great in some ways A captain receives $2,600 a year—a lieutenant but $1,600. A captain has charge of a whole station house, filling the vacancy caused by Captain Ithamer A. Mercer's death

It is understood that Lieutenant Driscoll would permit himself to be retired after he had been promoted On the recommendation Commissioner O'Meara hacks, he has been promoted, but he should not be compelled to pay that much more out of his own pocket.

How the contest between the head of the police force and some of the department officers will end is awaited with interest in the entire department. Certain that Commissioner O'Meara can promote sergeants to lieutenants, he can promote patrolmen to be sergeants and this he has done until the list is full. But Lieutenant Driscoll and the Veterans' Preference Act prevent promotions to any higher grade.

NEW MELLEN BOAT LINE TO CUT RATES

New Haven Interests to Back Hub-New York Rival to Metropolitan.

In spite of the fact that Wall street, has repeatedly asserted that President Charles Mellen, for the New Haven & Hartford Railroad, through J. Pierpont Morgan, had secured control of all the different lines operated by Charles W. Morse under the name of the Consolidated Steamship Company, the New Haven has decided to operate a freight line between Boston and New York in opposition to the Metropolitan line.

The announcement of the intention of Mellen interests to enter the coastwise freight trade between Boston and New York was made yesterday in such a way as to point out that freight rates were to be cut and that local New Haven officials denounced by the Metropolitan

At the same time the Metropolitan Steamship Company, the Morse line which has been engaged in its rates last August, when the Boston merchants threatened to organize an independent company in opposition, now announces that begining the first of next month the rates on classes of freight between here and New York are to be reduced by 25 per cent

Result of Committee's Work.

The entry of the New Haven, or New England Navigation Company, into the field here as a water freight competitor of the Metropolitan is declared to be due to the work of the committee appointed in August by President Jerome Jones of the Boston Merchants' Association.

This committee was instructed to canvass the freight rate situation most carefully and also to investigate the feasibility of the organizing and establishing an independent freight line to meet the Metropolitan and to destroy its monopoly here.

Yesterday it was announced that the Mellen interests had made overtures to the committee and made the organization of an independent company unnecessary by promising to operate the Bunker Hill and Fonger and Massachusetts freight steamers between here and New York, and at the same time to make a cut in freight rates practically twenty five per cent. below where they are now

Lower Rate on Metropolitan.

"Beginning December 1, the rate to New York on all classes of freight will be reduced 25 per cent, by the Metropolitan line," said George W. Apsey, general freight agent here, to a Boston Sunday American reporter. "We had made this the purpose of the Mellen interests to come into this field, and secured it with the support of Boston merchants

"You may say," continued Mr. Apsey "that the Metropolitan line will continue to run its boats. There will be no change except in the entry of a competitor in the field

Asked as to whether the Metropolitan had promised its rates here are to be reduced cut by a new line, Mr Apsey replied

I would not put it that way It is a matter of business. We have made a reduction before to-day and some of the other lines have already been notified of the cut. This reduction applies to all classes of freight. In fact, we are in vogue for all classes of freight."

No matter what is the basis or principle on the part of the Mellen interests, the fact remains that the merchants of Boston are to be the gainers, temporarily, at least.

"It is a fact that the New Haven has been trying to get a line of steamers here and New York," said Edwin F. Atkins of the merchants' committee

NEW OKLAHOMA OIL FIELD.

Enid, O. T., Nov. 16.—Oil has been struck at a depth of 480 feet on the J. B. Mattoon farm, near Apache. While the well is not a gusher, it simply seems to be plentiful and the oil has risen to a considerable height in the well so that it may be easily drawn from the hole by the use of buckets.

GUILD SCORES 'MAN BEHIND GRAFTER'

Governor Declares Hypocrisy Lurks Behind "Business Man's Administration."

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov 16.—At the Board of Trade banquet here to-night Governor John Gubbi, Jr., of Massachusetts, said that the people were realizing more and more the hypocrisy which lurks behind the shibboleth, a business man's government." He said that the people now demand "no more business man's government." He said in part

"The one change that most business men have with Bailey is no change The old Duke was wrecked one republic after another, and that wrecking to-day is practically based upon the rock of Australia The strong arm argument for government, the strong men of despair, to that State ownership is the only relief from grant law such as who is doing more for socialism, communism and anarchy to-day than any other is the highly respectable business man who for any reason buys legislation Graft is the corporation promoter who buys the Alderman inside the string band of the city, as well as the poor wretch who sells him self. The man in New York who found the New York Legislature organizing strikes and selling out would never have gone to prison if there were not business men willing to pay him to have trouble for them. Graft, whether thought, to make trouble for their competitors."

Now with the League polling a good sized highest vote for Governor at the State election the Democrats are determined

OUTLOOK BRIGHT FOR LEAGUE'S SUCCESS

Northampton, Nov. 16.—The Independence League is up and doing in this city and in every instance in its history has the outlook been so satisfying in every detail It has been called, however, to fill by election the vacancies in the Democratic ticket caused by the withdrawal of Mayor this year, and the League will turn its attention to candidates for the city council and the School Committee, to the election of reliable men for the city offices from every ward in the city

In a short time branches of the league will be organized in Williamsburg, Florence, Leeds, Hydeville and Easthampton before the November election, and it is considered probable that they will branch out into towns in the Connecticut valley

John N Cutler, who ran 800 ahead of the ticket in this city for mayor, has at last consented to run a candidate for alderman. He had been urged to by Republicans for the good of the party, but on account of important business, but has been induced to postpone his trip abroad and run for the office from the Ward Three district. FINANCIERS PREPARE CAMPAIGN TO PUSH UP PRICES IN STOCK MARKET

SLUMP NEAR END, TIDE WILL TURN

COUNTRY TO THE RESCUE

By Thomas C. Shotwell.

New York, Nov. 16.—It is almost time for those who have reviewed the stock market to "come to bat" once more and without regard to [illegible] the season is about at hand. A few [illegible] one or two more sharp passes, and it will be the end. It is hardly [illegible] now to invest, but it is [illegible] to carefully every decline in [illegible] the last break is [illegible].

These statements are made [illegible] but they are based on [illegible] of what really is going on [illegible] is a mysterious [illegible] in the hands of some [illegible] financiers in Wall street. The sincerity of their action is partly proved by the fact that they are letting [illegible] money remain on deposit in [illegible] Continue to [illegible] their command [illegible].

It is necessary [illegible] assembling cash to [illegible] must be looking forward [illegible] than those [illegible] the point many [illegible] tide will come when [illegible] Congress, the [illegible] message and the [illegible] For that, [illegible] remains but two or [illegible] agony for Wall street.

A Psychological Crisis.

Never before in the history of the world did the citizens of a great nation have a much cash in hand as the American people have at present. Never before did such a crisis present itself to a nation made up of so many intelligent people, in a country with a long enlightened population it would take a [illegible] nation that likes [illegible] property to [illegible] change in twenty-four hours, and very few do so. The absurdity of the feel [illegible] is beginning to appeal to the people. The time is past for selling on long [illegible] long areas of figures and long lists of [illegible] manufacturing [illegible] know all about it. There is no longer any advantage to be gained by [illegible] to exploiting any particular set of facts, because everybody knows all a soul [illegible] thing.

Let there be sounded one decisive note of cheerfulness and let [illegible] in Wall street the whole nation has confidence sound that note, and the American people will answer the call. There are reasons for expecting that note to be sounded in the near future.

It is the history of all periods of stress that the stock market [illegible] suffer and the first to recover. Thousands of men are being disciplined [illegible] the country. Prices of commodities are beginning to [illegible] have been reduced to such a [illegible] within a few weeks perhaps. We [illegible] are earnestly looking for some place to employ it profitably.

Will Turn to Stock Market.

The stock market will thus appeal to them, as it always does under such circumstances. For [illegible] readers of this paper have had presented to them the facts in regard to Wall street to such a way that [illegible] punishment that has come to those who were carefully [illegible] as to the condition of things.

With resources unimpaired, it will now be possible for investors to take advantage of the [illegible] of the past. [illegible] perienced men who have [illegible] their way into the stock [illegible] with which they were [illegible].

The rising tide [illegible] carried at the feet of [illegible] Many [illegible] ufacturing companies have [illegible] a superabundance [illegible] a lack of operating [illegible] have been proved a mistake. [illegible] are not enough men with executive ability [illegible] enough to manage them. The [illegible] bilities heaped upon a few [illegible] head of great [illegible] corporations [illegible] them irresponsible [illegible] positions.

Honest men are going [illegible] into positions of [illegible] and [illegible].

Confidence Returns as Money Panic Passes

THE money panic is slowly becoming a thing of memory. Although stringency still characterizes the monetary situation, the stress elements are on the wane, and with a return of stronger confidence the Eastern section of the country will again be in good order.

New York funds on the [illegible] to-day went to $2 per $1 000 cash on Friday, but they were quoted yesterday at $1.50 and $1.75, with the demand not so great. There has been some new money put out by one of the trust companies for four and six months' maturities at 6 per cent and 6 per cent, respectively, but most of the banks' transactions have been confined to renewals.

In New York call money is quoted at from 5 to 15 per cent, although most transactions are at 12 per cent. Gold engagements are still being made, and the total amount now arranged for import is close to $70 000 000. There is a rumor from abroad that because of the continued imports there will be an advance of the Bank of England minimum rate of discount on Monday to 8 per cent, unless shipments are made direct from Paris to this country.

[illegible] ...s will fade away together. Banks [illegible] ...ll be called banks and there will [illegible] people will no longer be called [illegible] ...panies. Officers of corporations will [illegible] ...he people will no longer be to the people's [illegible] and misrepresent the state of business for stock jobbing purposes. The owner of [illegible] property will [illegible] ...ock [illegible] ...ll not permit it to steal the other [illegible] ...ple.

Readjustment of Salaries

[illegible] ...ll be a readjustment in people's [illegible] ...ncy and nearly every one is [illegible] ...ll be a reduction in [illegible] ...ll be a necessity of doing [illegible] ...o help right things. Copper and coal [illegible] ...prices are working lower and there must [illegible] ...e a general readjustment of prices all [illegible] ...everything from wages down to the [illegible] ...

[illegible] ...the opinion of the [illegible] ...st judges of stock [illegible] ...for [illegible] ...operations. Some great declines in prices [illegible] ...are inevitable. But everybody cannot [illegible] ...be hurried to the poorhouse, and there [illegible] ...will be a decided [illegible] ...when [illegible] ...and that [illegible] ...time [illegible] ...

[illegible] ...Some of the bears are hoping for a [illegible] ...whole year of depressed markets. It must [illegible] ...be remembered that [illegible] ...periods [illegible] ...through the people were poor. The farmers [illegible] ...have not been poor. Never in their history [illegible] ...extravagances are truthful compared with [illegible] ...the bounties they received in 1906 and 1907. [illegible] ...For the last few years, owing to the boom [illegible] ...in manufacturing, the farmers have found [illegible] ...it impossible to get labor enough to work [illegible] ...their land to the utmost and they have [illegible] ...progressed bumper crops. The decline [illegible] ...in agriculture will [illegible] ...be a return [illegible] ...to the farms, with the result that [illegible] ...the coming year will see, perhaps, the [illegible] ...greatest crops in the history of the world. [illegible] ...The weather has been unusually favorable. [illegible] ...These crops will revive business [illegible] ...everywhere, and the people of the country [illegible] ...will look back with wonder at the [illegible] ...fears and smiles at the alarm they felt while living through it.

Financial Truth, Free—Gold Without Alloy.

More financial fraud has been unearthed, more fiscal trickery has been exposed and more schemes of stock jobbery have had their operations bared to the light of day by "King's Financial Bulletin" than by any other newspaper published in the world.

In these times it is pure gold, without alloy.

"King's Financial Bulletin" is an eight-page, weekly financial newspaper.

It tells the truth about investments—the kind to make and the kind to let severely alone—the truth without fear or favor. It uses plain, United States English, such as no reader can misunderstand. It calls a spade a spade.

It has saved the investors of America millions of dollars by its warnings against the pitfalls set to trap the unwary. It had made them millions more by pointing out the road to safe and profitable investments.

Its "Bureau of Investigation," conducted by a former United States Postoffice Inspector, wherein is answered, without charge, all questions regarding corporations and investments, is invaluable to the investor.

"King's Financial Bulletin" will be sent postpaid, free, to any investor who will ask me for it by letter or post card. Address C. F. KING, Financial Agent, Entire Fourth Floor, Journal Building, Boston.

REAL ESTATE IN DEMAND

Big Factory and Wharfage Booms Create Need for More Apartments.

"Where can a man live for such a small amount of money and have so many advantages as in South Boston?" said a representative real estate man in that locality recently. "You know we are on a peninsula here, the air is good, the land is high—remarkably high until you get to the harbor from Thomas Park, and then, in the near future, we have the park at the Point and extensive yacht anchorage accommodations.

"The man who rents over here gets the most for his money. We are near the city. Our car service is good, that is to the advantage of the people living in the Lincoln school district. Transportation is a big thing in a city like Boston, and we have it. We have no tenements, but some very handsome houses, and there has been money here in building.

"We have to confess, however, some who keep many cows and pigs in the yards, but we are now on the lookout for them, and by the first of next year we shall have no buildings, roofing with the card, $100,000 doesn't this look like progress?"

Big Factory Boom On.

South Boston has been a residential section for the last forty years, and now means for the first time in its history a large factory district. Many of the new factories are going up on the water front, and there is a big boom in property and building.

"The men we can get have come into this country and bought houses on Dorchester, Second and Third streets at reasonable prices, and instead of having to live on Second and Third streets they have moved out to Broadway, Dorchester, Fourth and Fifth streets, and have a chance to breathe.

DORCHESTER WILL PROTEST GAME

Claims Referee's Mistake Helped Rindge to Win Contest, 6 to 5.

Bitter defeat was again tasted by the scrappy Dorchester High team, yesterday afternoon, on the Lunenburg street grounds, Dorchester, Rindge Manual Training School of Cambridge, capturing the game by one point, the score being 6 to 5. Dorchester lost her fifth consecutive interscholastic contest, but had the satisfaction of making her first touchdown to a league game for two years, Cosby doing the trick.

After the game Coach Mathews and Manager Manser Haynes said they would protest the game, claiming that Rindge was given five downs instead of four in the second half, which enabled her to gain victory. Dr. Maguire, of Boston College, was on the side lines watching the game and claims that there was a mistake in the local referee's decision, giving Rindge four, and he will send in a report to the proper authorities.

Dr. Maguire explains the play as follows: "Dorchester had ball on the Rindge 40-yard line. Dorchester fumbled, losing the ball to Rindge Manual. On the next play Rindge lost two yards while trying to go through left tackle. Then Rindge gained twenty yards through right tackle. On the third play they went around the end and for one-half a yard and the fourth down. The referee, through his position on the downs, gave Rindge another chance, the ball being one-half a yard from the goal, O'Brien making the score. Hayes kicking the winning point.

The features of the game were the punting of O'Brien, and the bucking of Hayes, who gained whenever the distance was needed. Both teams showed fast and snappy work, Rindge making a fine all-round game in all its departments for Dorchester. Summary:

BOTH CAPTAINS PUT OUT OF THIS GAME

Bowdoin Kickers Win Maine College Championship, 34 to 5.

Brunswick, Me., Nov. 16—Bowdoin won the championship of the Maine college series by defeating Maine 34 to 5. Both teams played without their captains, who were put out in the first part of the game. Bowdoin early piled Maine after the first touchdown was made.

Maine was the favorite and shared the usual fate of over-confident teams. The Maine backs were light and slipped badly on the wet field.

Rondo Was 1 to 4 Odds.

When the return match between the two was announced by the race committee of the club, with the condition that Fred Bellows was to drive Rondo, the odds were 1 to 4 that Rondo would win. Bellows had driven Rondo in the previous race, but in one of the fifth heats Rondo had broken up and Bellows was thrown out of the sulky. But Bellows took Rondo back and showed that he was Rondo all over.

After the race crowds said that never was there a more determined driver than Bellows. But Rondo took Bellows back at the finish and showed that he was Rondo all over.

WADDELL AS FULLBACK.

Rube Waddell, the erratic old baseball pitcher, is now playing football for the Reading (Pa.) team. It will be remembered that Waddell was with the Hamburgs and Harrisburg teams when they were over. But they could not stay with Reading, and Waddell was signed to play fullback. Quaker fans can keep in trim.

RONDO NO MATCH FOR B. S. DILLON IN RACE FOR DORCHESTER DRIVING CLUB HONORS

With Fred Bellows in the sulky the race committee see fit to make the match of a clubhouse, to cost not less than $10,000. It is certain land near to the speedway can be obtained at a reasonable price ready for action

Bellows Throws Out Defi.

Fred H. Bellows, however, is anxious to have something to say concerning the championship, thinking that a mere speed contest to carry off honors is not the best way of settling the question. He has accordingly issued a challenge to Bill Dillon as his desire is to meet the fastest in the ring.

Bellows cannot see how the race committee are to throw down his defi, offering a chance to let him in when they do the matching at Roxbury during the days Ashfield Bell has won over Dillon, having speeding in 2:07¾. Rondo is also said that in quarter-mile heats he can beat Bell about a second, and he is now three times right to the thirty notch

Altro L., Cleans Up Pacers

The other ten races on the card yesterday were fat of interest. Altro L. cleaned up a couple of pacers in six heats, but had their measure in every heat he won. Dan Dillon took two heats from Altro L. getting the blue ribbon over his trotter in the first heat, and Dillon's 3 mile getting the blue ribbon over his trotter in the first heat, and Dillon's 3 mile heats were the best number to record. The Altro L. performance was the best of the week ago in scoring three straight heats, but Kilgallen, who was with Altro L. before the man he turned over to Ed Geers, the better of the two, Kilgallen headed a stiff field.

It is probable that at the weekly meeting of the club on Monday evening plans will be laid to begin looking toward the building

ENGLISH HIGH BEAT SOMERVILLE 6 TO 5

Sharry's Failure to Kick Goal After Touchdown Is Fatal to His Team.

English High won its championship interscholastic title from Somerville High on Broadway field, Somerville, by the score of 6 to 5. The Red team scored its points in the first half and succeeded in getting a touchdown in the second period, but Captain Sharry failed to kick a goal and thereby lost a chance to tie the score. The field was wet and the players slipped badly trying to get underway.

In the first half a 33-yard run by O'Brien put E. H. S. in position to score. He ran around the end for 20 yards and a touchdown. It was near the end of the first half when Somerville got the ball on its own 40-yard line. Two forward passes made the remaining distance. The

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 16.—Pennsylvania won a poorly played game from Michigan, 6 to 0, today. Pennsylvania made her first touchdown in the first half, but neither score was allowed.

Neither team had any offense to speak of, so neither gained ground consistently. Up to the time of the touchdown all the play had been in Michigan's territory. Like wise and Weidenhoff were used and been for the Wolverines, while Mercur and Mackenzie starred for Pennsylvania.

A forward pass was blocked and Magoffin picked up the ball and ran 30 yards. Keneth made a fair catch of a punt and Magoffin kicked a goal from the field.

BINGEN GOES TO TICONDEROGA, N.Y.

Noted Stallion Has Been Leased to Walter Jannier, the Prominent Breeder.

Bingen, 2 09¼, the trotting stallion which Arthur H. Parker, of New Bedford, gave $2,500 for at auction, and is one of the greatest sons of the famous Bingen, is to be leased to Walter Jannier for the next year and will be at Silver Spring Stock Farm, Ticonderoga, N. Y.

Bingen was bred in Kentucky, but at an early age was bought by parties in Maine, who disposed of him at two years to the late J. Malcolm Forbes. That fall he trotted a mile at Rigby Park in 2:12¼, and the next season was considered the best three-year-old out racing. His campaign was then continued till his record was 2:09¼.

At the closing out sale of the Forbes' Farm at Readville he was bought by Mr. Parker, who stood him at the Forbes' Farm till this year when he was removed to the Home Farm, also in the town of Milton.

HARVARD FIGHTING FOR A TOUCHDOWN EARLY IN THE GAME WITH DARTMOUTH

and packed the auto enclosure until there was room for no more.

Cheers For Melvin O. Adams.

In the cheering section there were men who had made their mark in the world, and who couldn't forget the one college in the world for them. Melvin O. Adams, of the Board of Trustees, who had done looks out for Dartmouth students by giving them jobs on the Boston Herald, was there with an expansive smile and cheers to burst. He was overheard when at the conclusion of the game the Plotiesly leaps of Hals capered round the field, and at big sight of him, called

"Bird, board, Adams!"

And Mr. Adams, with a rush that was a beauty, secured possession from a cheering leader of one large green megaphone with a huge "D" on it, and marched round the Stadium with it over his shoulder, just as happy as though he had won the big "M" himself in the State.

Charlie Bartlett, late candidate for Governor, was there, too, all enthusiasm. Justice George H. Bingham, of the New Hampshire Supreme Court, was as much as any student on the field. Dwight Hall Kinsley, member of Congress from Lowell, N., and George Higbee, City Solicitor of Dover, N. H., lead a large party of Green to the Green.

The Dartmouth side of the field was packed, and even when it seemed as if Harvard was going to score Hanover followers never lost their enthusiasm, but always took off their coats and went to work with a will. It was refreshing to see how much that was the lack of force in the cheers that came from their side of the field.

Newhall, Injured, Retires.

Last but not least were they. And if an Harvard. Despite the pleadings of Dale Charles Leonard and the rest of the cheer leaders, they couldn't raise up any whole-souled noise on the Harvard side, even when the occasion was such that there would have been in order.

Most [illegible], who was with Harvard [illegible] and knew some of the [illegible] and knew some of the green, if not all of them, didn't have [illegible] to get into the game.

In fact, [illegible] appeal couldn't bring out the support that the Harvard cheering ought to have.

Newhall cut and bleeding, but resentful of the interference of the coaches, who ordered him off the field for [illegible] a brilliant tackle, walked slowly toward the side lines and was soon lost from the Harvard sight. Before his own people could get busy with an appreciation of the great work he had done, his opponents recognized him.

From across the field they came the Dartmouth cheer, and then, "Newhall! Newhall! Newhall!"

[illegible] quarter was almost [illegible] Harvard [illegible] the effect that was his due. It was the same when Burr and Read went off the field. Injured in the fierce tackles of the Dartmouth men, who never lost an opportunity.

Stand Firm on Three-Yard Line.

Only once did the Harvard supporters seem to wake to the fact that they were there for some other purpose beside watching the game. That was when Harvard, fighting and fighting hard, held the Green on the three-yard line and saved a touchdown that it seemed impossible to prevent.

Then, for the first and only time in the game, did the Harvard side get up and yell, and truly express appreciation of the work of the first half. When the Harvard eleven had run off the field to be [illegible] cheered for the rest of the game by veterans of the Dartmouth line regardless of [illegible] institution, but [illegible] by their coaches [illegible] wrapped in their sweaters, and getting advice that showed [illegible] to be the captain of the team, [illegible] from in the centre of the field, they jumped forward as though they could not stand for the opportunity to show that they had mettle and stamina left.

It was one thing for them to cheer Harvard, something that not those "grads" of the New Hampshire institution had [illegible] and made many a Crimson soul feel as though the end of the world was [illegible].

"Jess" Rich, who played right [illegible] for Dartmouth, and was didn't [illegible] with the Green, but learned [illegible] some out of the West to get an education [illegible] Jumped through the line and [illegible] blocked one of Burr's punts. That was all he could do, but Kenyon, the big end, did the rest. He caught that ball as prettily as a pigskin was ever caught and placed it beyond the goal posts.

Through Line Like Wildcats.

Dartmouth's supporters went fairly wild. They hugged each other, danced and cheered and cried. Even the white-haired old grads who occupied the places of honor [illegible] of the stand, rose in all four to cut their joy.

And when Johnny Glaze kicked the goal they were glad some more. In fact there wasn't any limit to the amount of joy which those follows from Hanover had on tap and only wished the opportunity to let loose

It was after this that the game began in real earnest for Dartmouth. New life seemed to have been given those eleven men. They jumped through the Harvard line like wildcats, got after punts as though they were mad, and the secret of them with careful precision and rare good judgment.

Catching punts was something that the Harvard backfield seemed to have forgotten how to study. At critical moments the misjudgment of distances and fumbles proved more than costly.

There was one other feature that didn't cause any enthusiasm where there were supporters of the visitors, and that was the [illegible] catching a kick made by [illegible] Harvard man who tried to stop him, and followed by getting interference ran fifty-five yards for touchdown.

All of the Harvard spectators had [illegible] a few [illegible] and [illegible] there [illegible] cheering on the wall. [illegible] of their [illegible] of [illegible] chance of the [illegible] [illegible] care to waste the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

SHOW PLANS FOR HUB EXHIBITION LICENSES BIG FALLING OFF IN NUMBER GRANTED

Edited by J. C. KERRISON

RACES RECORDS EXPECTED AT ORMOND NOTES

HUB POLICE WILL STRICTLY ENFORCE NEW AUTO LAW

List of Those Who Have Failed to Reregister Their Motors Given to Officers.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Although almost 25,000 automobiles have at different times been registered in the Massachusetts Highway Commission, it is not easy to estimate that number are now in use in the State. Returns of receipts in excess of any single year's registration of motor vehicles during 1907 will be received from the registrar of motor vehicles.

Since the date of the registration has been reported 15,000 machines have been registered for the current year and 10,000 of numbers have been issued. This makes a grand total of 25,000 cars that are now known to be in use in this State. The owners of each of these cars have paid the sum of $5 each for the registration, the net receipts at that special department up to date being $50,000 with more to appear from

Many Fail to Register Again

The number of cars which have failed of reregistration under the present law is approximately 6,000 and of this number Chief Clerk Hollis of the automobile department of the State says that at least 75 per cent will never be registered. He bases this statement on the fact that a most 1,000 of the cars having registration are owned outside of the State, and are known as foreign cars. These, of course, will not be registered until such time as their owners have to again buy in Massachusetts. Added to this number he thinks that another 1,000 cars at least have changed hands, and no registration of the same made to the company. The other thousands he figures as a virtual loss owing to the removal or death of the owner, and it is his firm belief that enough names will be found to make up the 50 per cent of losses. There are many cars which have been put up for the later and the committee cannot impose a reregistration fee on any car which is not in use.

Although the police of the different cities and towns have been furnished with a list of residents of those places who have failed to reregister their cars, but little is being done in that line, as for instance out of a list of twelve names in one of the smaller towns of the State the chief of police reported that only three are now living there and out of that number two have put up their machines for the Winter, and will secure registration as soon as the spring arrives.

And this is but a fair sample of how things are meeting the law. It is impossible for an officer to determine in his own mind whether a machine has been reregistered or not. There has been no change in the number plates and unless each car is stopped, the police have little opportunity to determine the true position of the motorists.

Different Plates Next Year.

Next year things will be different, however. The commission has decided to issue new registration plates next season and they will be so different from the present plate that a glance at a glance whether or no the owner thereof has paid settled to the tax. The new plates will have the regulation figures, but instead of being white on blue as they will this year white, with the word "Mass." running across the top the next year 1907 and the left, so that all who run may read. The reissuing of these plates will not be inaugurated on the first of the year, and while the commission is unquestionably to be willing to reissue an old number on request it does not necessarily follow that his present number will be retained by any man unless specially requested to do so.

The work of the Highway Commission has been materially hampered by the enactment of the present law, and it will be doubly so on the first of the year. It means an endless amount of detail and work, and in order to keep things up to date the office forces will have considerable to do.

Lynn and Boston Police Active.

The police of Lynn and Boston are about to undertake the work of seeing that all who are now using motor cars on the highways conform to the law. Something like twenty copies of the list of delinquents have been furnished the police department of the city of Boston and it is understood that at least one of the police precincts will to-morrow inaugurate the rounding up process.

In Lynn the police have during the past three or four days been at work along this line, but owing to the difficulties encountered little prosecution has been conducted for failure to reregister. Still, every citizen ceases to be a victim, and it may be only a question of a few days when a thorough investigation is made, and those who have failed to reregister will be required to pay the piper, as well as their registration fee. The law has been in force long enough like three months now, and the commission and police authorities feel that in every leeway has been given motorists in the matter.

FOSDICK CO. GETS ITS NEW CARS

During the past week the Harry Fosdick Company received their models of the two lines of cars it will handle the present season, the Atlas and the Springfield. Both cars show to considerable advantage and both are well known trade specialties.

The Atlas has been on the market, such as proved one of the attractions of the recent New York show, and it is believed there is a great future for it. It runs along a degree of refinement and actual work have rendered a good account of themselves.

DEMONSTRATIONS AT HUB AUTO SHOW

Manager Campbell Says They Will Be a Feature of the March Exhibition.

One of the departments of the coming Boston automobile show which will appeal most strongly to the prospective purchaser, and a department which was given but little consideration at the last show, is the two recent New York exhibits in that known as the demonstration branch.

It is the annual subject to a still affair show and one which is to be initiated in fully as interesting as is the display of land on Lansdowne, as directed position in speaking with a matter yesterday Manager Campbell of the Boston Show said:

"The committee feels that some like thought and action should be devoted toward the demonstration of the cars, and with that idea in mind I am doing my utmost to secure a number of them. Demonstration cars are commonly limited will be run in hauling with the great deal in Mechanics Hall itself. In New York last fall I was greatly impressed with the method of working out these demonstrations, which I personally observed, and I am quite positive that we can see and hear a motor car in a much and more real practical way than by the mere idea of the ability of a car under power that by looking at one on a stand.

"Do you believe that the date of the Boston show is too late?" Manager Campbell was asked.

Late Shows the Thing.

"Certainly not, in view of what has occurred in New York. When the agitation for early shows was in vogue the fever reached Boston and I was on the bandwagon, but that a show in January or early February would be a success. It is the month of March, the month of Winter sports, when the average man begins to get interested for spring and summer and he begins to yearn for a touch of good, clear cold weather and for the automobile show that marks the motor. Then motor car construction has reached the present greatly developed state. It reaches its best, and I believe the greatest interest will be shown in the show and salesmen's association.

"Has a show been held earlier in the year, and did it prove successful? Certainly not, for visitors and the men who were thought he would be in the market simply dropped in to get all the information they could get and then went home to think it over. With a show in March, when the question of the purchase of a car is uppermost in the minds of the people, the dealers have in the majority of cases decided that my view was the right one.

KREBS, AFTER MAD SPRINT, FIRST IN LONG BIKE RACE

Defeats Fogler, Root and Mitten Who Were Picked to Start in the Final Miles.

Amid the wildest din which ever attended a six-day race Floyd Krebs won the six-day long race at the Park Square Rink last night, defeating Fogler, Root and Mitten, the other three men who contested with him for final honors.

Shortly before 11 o'clock, when the time for the big race was to end, the teams competing, the first division were called to the track and the candidates for the final sprint of a mile were placed on the mark.

Root, the three-time winner of the New York six-day races, was a big favorite and was picked to win by the majority of the 6,000 crazy fans. The men were allowed two laps before the gun going down the signal. Root took the lead on the first lap, closely followed by Fogler, Krebs and Mitten. They moved at a slow pace around the track watching each other carefully. Root constantly turning his head and keeping tabs on the three other sprinters.

Krebs Starts to Sprint.

Just after covering half a mile Krebs suddenly jumped his wheel ahead of Fogler and Root before they were aware of it or could catch him. With the crowd yelling like mad Krebs with his body bent almost double got going at express speed. Fogler was apparently next to Krebs for he was at his right wheel and was piloted along in front of Root, who was taken by surprise by the prettiest bit of stealing ever seen on a track.

Once torn around the runner at breakneck speed Krebs going at the top of his form, and Fogler in front of Root

This Mitten, the Iowa young sprinter, gave Root a close race, and going to the finish the leaders of the two teams, but the others saw otherwise. That Root was disappointed in the result was clearly evident, but he had no kick coming. He accepted his defeat in a sportsmanlike manner.

There were four teams tied for fifth place in the standing, and this second division had it out by themselves. Hardy and Downing, Sherwood, Holbrook and Anderson were the four representatives who faced the starter.

How Teams Finished.

Krebs-McLean	1147	1
Fogler-Moran	1147	1
Root-Bargetta	1147	1
Mitten-Keegan	1147	1
Downing-Hopper	1147	0
Sherwood-Limberg	1147	0
Anderson-Wiley	1147	0
Holbrook-Galvin	1147	0
Connolly-Wyatt	1146	0
Bizzarri-Hill	1133	7

Downing Wins Fifth Honors.

Downing led all the way and won by a wheel's length from Sherwood, who was the same distance in front of Anderson.

The result of the race gives first money to the Krebs-McLean team, which was not picked better than second or third at the beginning of the race, but the ability of Krebs as a sprinter and a clever judge of pace was unquestioned, as was proved when he was put to the test.

The last few hours of the race were devoid of any sensational riding, as the men were satisfied to wait till the last call and settle it decisively.

The Connolly-Wyatt team was allowed to get back a couple of laps, but was prevented getting in the second division by those riders in it, as they were forced back when they tried for more than the two laps.

PILGRIMS PLAN FOR SPRING TRIP

Will Leave, at Little Rock and Then Play Many Exhibition Games Home.

Manager J. F. Dowd of the Boston Nationals has given out the itinerary of the Boston team's spring training trip to the South. The team trained last year at Little Rock, Ark., and Manager Dowd will send his men to the same place next spring. The trip last Spring was a most pleasant one, and Manager Dowd will send his men to Little Rock early in March, and then it will start on its return journey. Many of the cities and towns on the way will be included in the list, but no games in Southern cities will be played with the Southern clubs for the club.

MALDEN H. SURE OF CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeat Everett High, 12 to 2, and Have Only Weak Medford Team to Play.

[By 5,000 people saw the Everett High School go down in defeat at the hands of the Malden High School team on the athletic field, Malden, yesterday afternoon by a score of 12 to 2. The only score made by Everett was a safety by Cox, the Malden right tackle, in the second half, he dropping back of the goal for a punt, when the Everett team broke through. Instead of taking a chance of having the punt blocked Cox allowed himself to be forced back, scoring the only points made by Everett. The game yesterday practically decided the championship of the Suburban League, Malden having the same percentage, standing with Medford, but the latter is not in the same class with Everett and Malden, and the championship will go to Malden.

Next game, the star quarterback of the Malden team, was injured in the Everett-Friday night as being a poor gridiron, was in the game and it was owing to his powerful ability to size up the plays that the great generalship was shown and allowed the Everett players and won the game. Everett knew his tactics, and felt that they continually got the jump on them, and could not get through the line or around the ends before Everett could get started.

Malden scored the first touchdown in the first half and the other in the second. Malden opened the game by kicking off to Lewis and after considerable sparring Malden secured the ball on Everett's fifteen yard line on a fumble and after unsuccessful try for a goal from placement by Clark, which hit the crossbar, Malden again secured the ball and in a series of rushes Clark carried it over for a touchdown, also kicking the goal.

Everett kicked off in the second half to Clark who nearly got through the entire Everett team for a clear field, but was downed after carrying the ball thirty-five yards. Everett scored two points on a safety by Cox shortly after this and Malden in a series of rushes and forward passes carried the ball near to Everett's goal where Clark took the ball over for a touchdown on a beautiful forward pass by Clark. Clark kicked the goal.

FIRST ROLLER POLO GAME IN HUB

Roller polo will be resumed in the city to-morrow night in the new arrangement of the National Roller Polo League schedule.

The team selected for Boston will compare favorably with any in the league. The team which represented Canton, O., in the Western League has been signed in a body. This team won the championship with the record of fifty-eight victories and nineteen defeats. The players are: Harkins and Mercer, rushers; Hardy, center; Carrigan, half; Mahoney and Main, guards; Manager W. H. Pyet has his lines out for Wad Weston, who has been a star for the old Boston team, and has not yet given up all hope of handling the game.

The team will be at home two nights every week on Monday and Thursday. The games will be played on the surface inside the Wright & Ditson store in Columbus. The floor area thus provided is a good deal larger than that called for in the rules and regulations. This will help the players in their work, and the management for the team, black and gray trimmings will be worn for the first time. It is very probable that Tommy Connolly, the American League baseball umpire, will Latter Weakened in Second Half After Holding Williams Strong in First.

WILLIAMS BEATS AMHERST, 26 TO 6

Williamstown, Nov. 16.—Williamstown defeated Amherst here this afternoon, 26 to 6. There was a record-breaking attendance and tremendous enthusiasm made an additional interest. The crowd began to gather an hour before the game, making Weston Field gay with the royal purple and purple and white.

Williams kicked off and soon recovered the ball, Amherst failing to gain. Williams on side kick fell into the hands of Reid, who crossed the line and made a shower of hats and sweaters from the Williams rooters. Williams again kicked off and Amherst failing to gain, punted to Williams' thirty-yard line and made a shower of hats and sweaters from the Williams rooters. Williams again kicked off and Amherst failing to gain, punted to Williams' thirty-yard line and made a shower of hats and sweaters from the Williams rooters. Williams again started its proceeding for the Amherst goal line, but Amherst held Malcolmson and Williams ten yard line went astray, and fell into the hands of Wyckoff, who started for the purple goal line and ran 42 yards before he was tackled. Williams forced he was stopped. With the score six to six, both teams piled up the scoring so fine, till near the end of the half, with the ball on the visitors' forty-yard line Williams dropped a neat goal and put Williams four points in the lead.

Williams' Condition Told.

In the second half Williams' better condition told and Amherst's line was forced for yard after yard. In three minutes of play Williams added another five to Williams' second touchdown. Amherst visibly weakened after this and Williams now had an other man shouted across the goal line. The forward pass worked admirably and time and again Williams used it for yard after yard. After a somewhat more stubborn resistance on the part of Amherst, Williams again started proceeding along. Lawler, Reid and Williams ripping through five and ten yards at a time till the goal line was crossed for Williams' fourth touchdown.

After the next kick off Amherst braced and the ball was kept going back and forth, neither side gaining to any extent, but the ball was in the visitors' territory.

HOPKINS' RUN BEST HARVARD FRESHMEN

Hopkins, the plucky little Yale Freshman, made a touchdown and kicked the goal for the Harvard freshmen on Soldiers Field yesterday by the score of 6 to 0 in the annual game.

It was a fluke goal only the second time in the history of the annual game that a goal from placement has been kicked. Pope, the Yale freshman quarterback, was the player who kicked the goal.

The Cambridge team outplayed its rival in every department of the game. Both teams were strong on the offense, but lacked steadiness on the defense. The Harvard men were more proficient in the use of the forward pass.

TUFTS NO MATCH FOR WEST POINT

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 16.—The Army had an easy time with Tufts today and defeated the Medford boys by a score of 51 to 0. The Soldiers made no attempt to run up a large score and made sure first until at the finish half their lineup was sometimes. The visitors were never dangerous, and though the game was a one sided one they were fighting gamely at the last.

Tufts worked the old-fashioned double pass several times for good gains and a new trick play which they sprung twice deceived the Soldiers for a short time gaining on every attempt. Before the first quarter for Tufts played a star game, and Smith also was a great factor in the visit ors' ground gaining until he was hurt.

The Army's first score came before the end of the whistle had ceased to echo. Rowan, making a fumble on Tufts thirty yard mark, made three efforts on as was downed, Smith and Burles were sent into the line for five yards at a time, and Burles scored the first touchdown, but Weeks failed to kick the goal. A poor pass gave the Army the ball and another fumble by Tufts gave the Army a fifteen yard mark, Grubbs going over and Weeks kick the goal in the first half ended.

Mountford started the scoring in the second half by a pretty run of forty-five the twenty-five yard mark. A fumble gave the Army the ball in field and a fine yard pass nicely executed for touchdown by Rowan brought down on Tufts twenty-five yard line. From here Chamberlain and Smith tore through for five yard gains and Chamberlain scored. Weeks kicking the goal.

A fumble near the end of the second half gave the Army the ball on Tufts' forty-yard mark, after they had carried it forty yards. When then was entirely lost and the ball on the visitors' six-yard mark

TERRIER SHOW A MONEY MAKER

Judge Green Says Best Lot of Bostons He Ever Saw Benched.

All the officials connected with the specialty show at Mechanics Building, held under the auspices of the Boston Terrier Club, were broad, beaming smiles when the show Saturday was concluded last evening, and the result proved the exhibition just passed was the equal of any held by the club.

Secretary Frank Teeling said that when the doors opened on Wednesday the show was on velvet from the entrance fees, and advertising, etc., that had been received, and the receipts during the four days have been a most out of have been as follows:

There was some opposition in certain quarters to the judging, but it was generally conceded that the entry list was not refereed.

Knockers Scorched.

The knockers got a scorcher when Green awarded first to Hallowmoor Glory over Cupid's Sweetheart, and not afterwards had they a word to murmur.

In speaking of the show, Judge Green allowed it was by far the best lot of Bostons he ever saw benched. In one of the classes no less than fifteen were good enough to take a blue ribbon on ordinary occasions. He never could have a more difficult task to judge and be pleased than in the judging

With these facts it is greatly to be regretted that the Judges' Association failed to make Award recommendations regarding his excellent work in his office.

$1,000 Offered for Sonny II.

Arthur Mulvey had an offer during the day of $1,000 for Sonny II., but the price would not reach him. He remained in the novice class, and took the $25 in gold for the best dog or bitch shown for the first time.

Judge Green has had the offer to judge the Eastern National Terrier Show in Madison Square Garden, but could not accept, as he will be unable to be present.

After the show several of the choice puppies changed hands, the affair by having a gathering at which many were present. Many of the exhibitors will be present to meet again at the exhibition in 1908.

REGNIER STAR MAN IN BROWN GAME

Made One Touchdown After a Run of Seventy-five Yards Against Vermont.

Providence, Nov. 16.—Brown defeated the University of Vermont team this afternoon by a score of 76 to 0. The game proved much easier for Brown than it was expected, and the Vermonters put up a weak fight. The Brown players time almost every play known in the game and on new and material gains.

The visitors were totally unable to check the Brown line plungers, and a great amount of the ground gained was got in this manner. The star player on the Brown team was Regnier, Maylew a mate on the left half back. He put up the same kind of a game and in one instance scored a touchdown after a run of seventy-five yards. The longest run of Artemus Field was the 75-yard sprint of Dennis Regnier Maylew a close second in mention, as well as that of Cassidy and Hogan of the Vermont team.

IRISH GIRLS SHOW HOW TO MAKE LACE

HOPE TO CREATE MARKET

A novel industrial exhibit, which appeals to both the sentimental and the practical sides of life, is the lace-making work by native Irish girls, now in progress in this city.

The exhibit is on the third floor of the main store of the James A. Hoganson Company. As a demonstration of lace-making it naturally catches the eye of all men and women, especially women, who go to that section of the store. Of course, men cannot be supposed to take the acute interest in lace manufacture that women do. But the fact that three attractive Irish girls from the Old Country are engaged in making and showing the laces does not make the exhibit any the less appealing.

When it is realized that an effort to build up the native lace industry in Ireland is back of all this demonstration, the exhibit acquires a sentimental value which makes deep impression.

Booth Trimmed in Green.

The exhibit is contained in a booth appropriately decorated in green, with Irish flags and mottoes. The girls are Miss Katherine Flynn, Miss Rose Exon and Miss Mary O'Flanagan. In cases, on forms, and spread out on tables are samples of lace work—lace cuffs, berthas and other gauds.

The lace is intricate and wrought with a perfection that is possible only after much practice. When it is known that one beautiful lace bertha on exhibition requires a month of one girl's time, an idea is obtained of the patience and labor required to evolve the finished product from the tiny strand of linen thread from which the lace is knit.

In charge of the lace, the exhibit and the girls is the Rev. Father Michael O'Flanagan, a native of Loughlynn, County Sligo, Ireland. He is Art Master and Irish Professor in Summerhill College, Sligo. At present he is traveling through America at the wish of Bishop John J. Clancy of Roscommon, one of the leaders in the Irish industrial movement. Father O'Flanagan is a cousin of the three girls in his charge.

Are Creating Market.

It is the desire of Father O'Flanagan and those concerned with this industrial movement to create a demand for Irish-to-see.

MAIDS MAKING IRISH LACE

point lace in America, so that merchants here will increase their orders for it. This will enlarge the output in Ireland and thus give occupation for the native Irish. The work can be done at home and a heavy demand for the lace would result in vast benefit to the struggling Irish people.

The exhibit will be here through this coming week, then will journey to another city to continue the work of demonstration. The lace-making, as the girls knit swiftly and steadily, is pretty work to see.

NEWS AND NOTES OF INTEREST IN THE LABOR WORLD OF BOSTON

City Employes Plan Today to Make Grievances Medford Campaign Issue.

To organize the city employes of Medford and make their grievances an issue in the city campaign, a mass meeting will be held to-day at Falsters' Hall, Medford.

The laborers claim that the scale of wages is $2 a day and less, that the eight-hour standard is not observed, and that aliens are employed on city work.

This meeting is largely the outcome of the semi-annual convention of the Federation of State, City and Town Employes' unions, held recently at Malden, which adopted a resolution declaring that the method of employing city labor at Medford is "un-American." The resolution condemned the Medford system.

It is the aim of the Federation to assist local unions in any efforts they may make to bring about the employment of citizen labor under legal and union conditions in Medford. Federation men say, special efforts will be brought to bear. Candidates for election to city offices will be questioned as to how they stand on the proposition to pay a $2.50 wage for an eight-hour day.

President Black and Secretary Fitzgerald of the Medford Central Labor Union; President Michael J. Hilton and Secretary James Gorman of the Federation of State, City and Town Employes' Unions; Jeremiah Herlihy of the Newton City Men's Union and Ernest A. Smith of the Roxbury Town Employes' Union, will speak at to-day's meeting.

The joint council of Boston City Department Employes Unions has elected these officers: James P. Hinds, Street Department Union, president; E. F. Dunn of the Laborers, vice-president; William Carr of the Water Department Union and William P. Gregory of the Sanitary and Street Cleaning Department Teamsters and Helpers' Union, vice-presidents; Timothy Riordan, Sewer Department Union, treasurer; W. A. Bonazzi, Public Grounds Department Union, secretary.

United Hatters' Union joint council has decided to hold the Joint shinty-ay reunion and annual ball Friday, Jan. 31, in Odd Fellows Hall. George Charron of No. 9 is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

SPURNED, WEALTHY INVENTOR KILLS WOMAN, THEN SHOOTS SELF

NOW DYING IN HOSPITAL

Enraged at Her Refusal to Marry Him After She Had Divorced Husband.

MOTHER OF 3 CHILDREN

Little Girl, Horror Stricken, Sees Parent Killed, Powerless to Save Her Life.

HARTFORD, Ct., Nov. 16.—Insane with love for Mrs. Dora Luthje, his young and beautiful housekeeper, who said she would not wed him upon securing a divorce from her husband, George Boeler, a wealthy New York and Hartford inventor, killed her with a revolver in his apartments today and failed in an attempt at suicide, though he shot himself three times in the head.

The tragedy occurred at No. 415 Capitol avenue, and was witnessed by Mrs. Luthje's twelve-year-old daughter, Rita, who was at lunch with her mother and Boeler when he killed the woman.

Boeler is in the Hartford Hospital with a bullet wound in his brain. Mrs. Luthje's body lies in the home of Mrs. Luthje's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Barrett, 415 Capitol avenue, and the children are being cared for by neighbors.

Boeler is dying and the police will not question him. Mrs. Luthje was divorced from her husband, Edward Luthje, of Providence, a few months ago, and it was generally understood that she would soon marry Boeler.

Girl Begs for Aid

Boeler was standing at the table where he had just been eating, with the smoking pistol in his hand, and blood streaming down his face from three wounds. The screaming girl, who had seen her mother shot to death, herself in fear for her life, ran to a house and gave the alarm.

Boeler made no objection to his arrest. He was first taken to the police station, but as he was unable to appear in court in the morning, he was taken to the hospital.

After seeing the handsome woman the man had so relished fall dead before him, he threw the revolver before him, he threw at his own head. The first shot simply grazed his temple. The second entered his jaw and ranged backward.

Mother of Three Children.

Mrs. Luthje was thirty-two years of age and the mother of three children, Rita being the eldest. The woman had separated from her husband, Edward Luthje of Providence, for whom Boeler was made to love with Mrs. Luthje. Boeler declared that she would not marry him after she was granted a decree, but in fact it is believed he proposed to her immediately.

Boeler is forty years of age and a brother of Charles Boeler, a photographer at No. 126 Cedar street, New York. The slayer has invented a machine for molding and welding metal, which he believed would make him a millionaire.

Girl's Story of Shooting.

"Mamma went into the bedroom to get some clothes to go up town," said Rita, the 12-year-old daughter of the victim. "Mr. Boeler was asked to come out of the room. Mr. Boeler moved as if to go to my mother. He stood right by the table and was within a few feet of her. Then when she came through the door the pistol exploded and Mr. Boeler fell down. He got out my mother then and I ran up to Mrs. Ford's house and called for help as I ran. I heard him fire another shot, which must be the one that he fired at himself."

NEW QUEEN OF SEAS CROWNED GOLD SHIP

CARRIES TWELVE GI

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Nov. 16.—The Mauretania the largest steamer in the world, is now at high sea racing to this port in an attempt to beat the world's record for the trans-Atlantic voyage of four days nineteen hours and ten minutes, established by her sister ship, the Lusitania, on her last voyage.

Both liners, the latest additions to the Cunard Line, sailed Saturday, the Mauretania one hour ahead of the Lusitania, for New York, and the Lusitania from New York to Liverpool. They are expected to pass each other in mid ocean. The average speed of the Lusitania on her record trip was 24.7 knots an hour.

Carries $14,000,000 in Gold.

On her trial trip the Mauretania maintained an average speed of 27.86 knots. This speed if kept up across the ocean would very nearly place her in the [illegible] day class.

But even if she does not break the speed record, the Mauretania has one big mark another record. Stored in her ship's [illegible] is $14,000,000 in gold, a record amount, and $4 passage more than the Lusitania carried on her last trip.

The gold ship, the Lusitania was called, but it is hoped that this will [illegible] to her sister ship.

Ever since the first steamboat was launched has the sailing of any boat aroused such widespread interest as centered in the Mauretania and [illegible] the ocean [illegible] awaiting the inaugural sailing of the progress of the new liner.

Although sister ships built on the [illegible] not resemble the same, the Mauretania is slightly larger than the Lusitania. It also has engine room improvements which are expected to give her at least five per cent. more power.

5,000 Electric Lights.

The Mauretania has accommodations for 2,800 passengers—500 first cabin, 350 second and [illegible] third. There is not room in the crew.

Among the special features introduced into the new Cunarder are elevators for conveying passengers from one deck to another a means for the use of pneumatic travelers, a cooling system for supplying cool air to [illegible] different parts of the ship, and [illegible] furnished by 5,000 electric lights. In addition, there are almost 1,000 windows and 500 patent ventilating shafts.

Turbine engines of 70,000 indicated horse-power will propel the ship at the sea [illegible] which is [illegible] propeller. The outermost shafts are connected with [illegible] and the inner shafts are rotated by the low pressure engines, in accordance with the Admiralty requirements, as an armed cruiser, she is fitted with an armament of twelve six inch guns.

HEIRS TO LARGE ESTATE

SEPARATED over thirty years and not until recently aware that each was in existence, Mrs Daniel D. Smith of Woonsocket, R. I., and Irving H. Brigham, a well-known shoe man of Lynn, brother and sister, are the latest claimants to part of the fortune left by the late Peter B. and Robert Brigham of Boston, whose legal heirs they declare they can prove themselves.

They have engaged counsel, through whom they will fight to regain property to which their parents were heirs from relatives in Boston and Westboro. The sister and brother have but recently been united as the result of an ad. in the papers by the Lynn man.

United by an Ad.

Their story is one of separation and meeting by strangers. When he was three years old the brother declares he was abducted by a Boston man, now deceased, in whose care his mother had left him. He was sent to Auburn, Me., where he grew up by a family in that city.

The sister, Mrs. Smith, the proud mother of five pretty children, was given by her parents into the hands of a family in Boston, and later was legally adopted by them. She has long known that somewhere she had a brother, but the long years that followed that his sister was alive. He remembered her as a tiny baby.

Letters which Mr. Brigham has in his possession establish his identity and claims to property left by his father, Harrison Ray Brigham, who died twelve years ago in Brockton. The sister and brother believe that their mother is still alive and married again. They will continue a search to locate her.

Parted Since Babies.

For eight years the mother kept in touch with her youngest daughter, and, according to Mrs. Smith, the mother tried to bridge her one day while she was attending school in Mendon by offering her money to get into a marriage. The girl refused, and from that day the mother was never known to have heard from her for twenty-three years. Mrs. Smith has lived on a farm in Woonsocket, where she and her foster-mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Nichols, walked with love.

Mrs. Nichols has been twice married, and it was during the second marriage as Mrs. Elizabeth Aldrich of Mendon that she adopted the Brigham baby. She lived for many years freed to get some trace of Irving Brigham, and it was not until which led to a correspondence resulting in the meeting of brother and sister and a decision that her adopted daughter and the Lynn man were the heirs to large sums of money, rightfully theirs through their parents, and claiming that the work of the Lynn man will prove successful in the recovery of the fortune

Heirs to Brockton Man.

The parents of the reunited brother and sister were separated owing to family affairs while they were living in Milford. Both of the children were born in that town. It was in 1876 that Irving was given into the hands of Boston people by his mother. That same year Mrs. Nichols got a baby girl, which she was given to Mrs. Nichols for adoption by the mother, who declared she could not keep the decree of fate.

Irving Brigham, the brother, was peculiarly adopted by his foster parents in Auburn, Me., and grew to manhood there. He also left them to seek his own fortune later coming to Boston. There he met with whom he had lived gave him some letters, which showed he was the son of the late Harrison Brigham, at one time living in the manufacturing district of Brockton and Westboro. He was also told that his mother was alive somewhere near Providence.

Relatives of Hub Brigham.

Lately he learned who his parents were, that his father Harrison also had a son Henry Brigham, had died in Brockton, leaving some property, and that he was one of many in the immediate family of Peter and Robert Brigham of Boston, who amassed a fortune in the real estate business.

"I am very happy to at last know I have a brother," said Mrs. Smith to a Boston American reporter at her home in Woonsocket Hill. "Our reunion, which occurred a few weeks ago, was a very happy one. I am sure I have a right to some of the money which should be ours from our father's estate. I am going to fight for my assistance in his effort. I don't know much about my brother's business affairs as yet, and how much I care to see here, for no one knew how hard her married life and mine have been. I don't think she caused her husband any trouble or grief of any kind.

"I rejoice in the discovery made by my brother, because I never had a trace of my real identity and his. I had always hoped that some time I would be able to find out, known to me, for when a young girl I frequently was taunted with having no parentage."

Vainly Seek Mother.

Under auspices of both Peoples [illegible] to meet his own mother. So far [illegible] William of Worcester, but neither can tell us what become of her. We believe her to be alive, and perhaps sooner or later we shall know the truth."

Irving Brigham, the brother, has found he has several cousins on his mother's side, but of his father's family Charles Brigham [illegible] and of Worcester, and [illegible] of Westboro, and [illegible] of Boston, are the only [illegible] of the family.

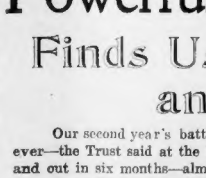
2nd Year's Battle With Powerful Piano Trust

Finds Us Still Cutting Prices and Selling Trust Pianos

Our second year's battle with the Piano Trust is drawing to a close—and we are stronger than ever—the Trust said at the beginning of the fight that it would force us to the wall and have us down and out in six months—almost twenty-four months have passed and here we are—selling more trust pianos and for less money than ever—and why? Well, we won't take all the credit—the people were with us from the start—We have lots of letters testifying to that—the people well understand that the Trust is a trust only for the purpose of keeping up high prices—the people understand that the only reason the Trust picked a fight with us was because we would not enter into an agreement with the Piano Trust to keep up prices—In this we protected the public—the public bought of us at cut prices—The Piano Trust as it has been organized for the past few years cannot cut prices—this fact threw the economical trade to us—that is why we are still fighting—We promise you this—We will never enter into any contract with the Piano Trust to raise prices—Even if we go broke keeping faith with the people.



WHERE PIANOS ARE SACRIFICED.

$5 Down—$1 a Week

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

3 MONTHS' LESSONS FREE to everyone buying a Piano of us this week—the finest piano instruction possible.

Don't get the impression that only second-hand Pianos can be had at these sales—as a matter of fact we sometimes sell the entire stock of new Pianos of some dealer who, through force of circumstances, was obliged to "shut up shop," store his stock, and finally let it go. We have hundreds of new Pianos that in the "course of events" come up in the salesroom to be sacrificed.

VICTORIA HELD KEY TO DRUCE MYSTERY

HAD SECRET INFORMATION

London, Nov. 16.—A woman lies beneath a tomb at Frognore, who, if she could solve with a single word the great Druce mystery and the whole strange life and death of that strange man, the famous Fifth Duke of Portland.

She could tell whether the grave beneath the Druce headstone in old Highgate cemetery is filled with lead or the bones of T. C. Druce.

She could tell whether there ever was a Thomas Charles Druce who kept the bazaar in Baker street, or whether it was the Duke of Portland in disguise.

She could tell whether the present Duke of Portland is the rightful heir to the $500,000,000 estates which he holds, or whether a poor Australian carpenter should have them.

The woman was Victoria, late Queen of England.

Long before Mrs. Druce startled the Empire (in 1895) with her claim to the gigantic Portland estates and told the story of the Duke of Portland's double life, the present Duke, who was born in 1857, had asked the Queen for the hand of Princess Louise, ten years his junior. Even the good old Duke of Fife, her present husband, knows that her first love was young Portland—dashing soldier, supposed heir to millions and one of the handsomest men in the Coldstream Guards.

Refused Her Consent.

The Queen herself had bestowed many honors on the youthful nobleman. She had commanded him to attend the inner circles of her court. He was a prime favorite of the present King, then Prince of Wales. It was rumored that Queen Victoria said there was no more eligible young man in her dominions.

Yet when the Duke craved permission to pay serious suit to the willing Princess Her Majesty refused. The reason for the refusal was diplomatically conveyed to the Duke. It might be found that with so eccentric a predecessor as the fifth Duke of Portland a cloud on the title was not an impossibility.

Thus it happens, because Victoria knew so much of the eccentric fifth Duke of Portland, the Princess Louise is now Duchess of Fife, while she who was Miss Winifred Dashwood is wife to the "clouded title."

Allegations by Druces.

A part of what the dead Queen had in mind when she denied young Portland the Princess's hand is now slowly coming to light.

The Druces, seeking to prove that the old Fifth Duke played a Jekyll and Hyde life, allege that he murdered his brother, Lord George Beauclerk, in 1845, threw off the crime to other shoulders and thus won the famous Welbeck Castle and the Portland estates for himself. They say that remorse over the fratricide he had committed, coupled with love for a woman beneath his station, led him to assume the dual role.

Charcoal Stops Gas On Your Stomach.

Trial Package Sent Free.

Charcoal, pure, simple charcoal, absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas. Where does the gas go to? It is just absorbed by the charcoal,—the gas disappears and there is left a pure, fresh, sweet atmosphere, free from all impurities and germs.

That's what happens in your stomach when you take one or two of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful purifiers science has yet discovered.

You belch gas in company, sometimes, by accident, greatly to your own humiliation. That is because there is a great amount of gas being formed in your stomach by fermenting food. Your stomach is not digesting your food properly. Gas is inevitable. Whenever this happens, just take one or two of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges right after eating, and you will be surprised how quickly they will act. No more belchings; no more sour risings. Eat all you want and what you want, and then if there is any gas going to be formed, one of these wonderful little absorbers, a Stuart Charcoal Lozenge, will take care of all the gas.

And it will do more than that. Every particle of impurity in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away by the charcoal. No one seems to know why it does this, but it does, and does it wonderfully. You notice the difference in your appetite, general good feeling, and in the purity of your blood, right away.

You'll have no more bad taste in your mouth or bad breath, either from drinking, eating or smoking. Other people will notice your bad breath quicker than you will yourself. Make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, so when you talk to others you won't disgust them. Just one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath sweet, and make you feel better all over for it. You can eat all the onions and odorous foods you want, and no one can tell the difference.

Besides, charcoal is the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood,—every particle of poison or impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing,—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Wilhelm, the War Lord of Germany, Offers the Olive Branch to France

H.I.M. THE GERMAN EMPEROR.

THE EMPEROR ON HIS YACHT.

H.I.M. THE GERMAN EMPRESS. H.R.H. PRINCE JOACHIM AND PRINCESS VICTORIA LOUISE.

KAISER ACTS AS PEACE MESSENGER

Wilhelm Is Determined to Offer the Olive Branch to France.

London, Nov. 16.—The war lord of Germany aspires now to the title of Europe's peace messenger, and it is declared that this present visit to England is primarily due to his desire to promote good relations between the two countries, which, during the past few years, seemed to be drifting further and further apart.

Not only that, but the air is full of rumors that Germany will offer the olive branch to France in the near future, and that the Kaiser is determined to obliterate the memories of Sedan in the minds of all Frenchmen.

King Edward is at present busily engaged in engineering a meeting next Spring, somewhere in the Mediterranean, when the Kaiser and President Falleres will come together and endeavor in truly brotherly fashion, with the King acting as an umpire to call time on the exchange of assurances of undying affection.

This meeting, it is said, has been also suggested by the Kaiser, who takes great pains, meanwhile, to drop that he was accepted by his fear that the triple alliance of Germany, Italy and Austria exists but on paper, and that its disruption is but a matter of a short time.

Diplomatic circles are certain that a move is contemplated whereby France will be approached, and that the sword of Damocles in the form of a war between Gaul and Teuton, in which case the latter would find himself in an isolated position, will be at last successfully removed by the skilful hand of Wilhelm.

The Kaiser took occasion to emphasize his mission of peace in accepting the degree of Doctor of Laws, conferred on him by Oxford University, when he praised by the Rhodes scholarship system, because it aided in bringing about a better understanding between the different countries.

The Kaiser was specially cordial to the newspaper men, who presented him with a address to-day. His Majesty said:

"The power you wield is great and most beneficial when exercised in the direction of promoting friendship among the nations. I am glad to meet you, and I hope you will continue to foster the friendly sentiments between our two nations, which are so necessary to the peace of Europe."

The result of the examination of the Kaiser's throat by Professor Sir Felix Simon, who was called into consultation by the Emperor's physician, Dr. Ilberg, is zealously guarded; but it is rumored that he found no reason for alarm, and that he predicted that with rest the monarch will eventually be completely cured of his disease.

KING ALFONSO AT ROYAL WEDDING

London, Nov. 16.—The marriage ceremony between Princess Louise of Orleans and Prince Charles of Bourbon took place at 8:30 o'clock this morning in St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church at Eversham.

The Princess was accompanied by her mother, the Countess of Paris. The register was signed by King Alfonso and the Duke de Calabio, on behalf of the bridegroom, and by the Duke of Orleans and the Duke of Guise, on behalf of the bride.

It was a red letter day for the little Worcestershire town of Eversham and one that is not likely to be surpassed in its annals. Seldom indeed has been beheld, except perhaps in the case of reigning royalties, a more brilliant scene, at which were present a reigning king, two queens and innumerable princes and princesses of the various dynasties of Europe. The wedding was celebrated under circumstances of unusual splendor. The bride was given away by the Duke of Orleans. In accordance with French custom there were no brides-maids. The altar was decorated with gold vases filled with flowers.

The ceremony at St. Mary's lasted only ten minutes. It was followed at noon by the nuptial mass which was celebrated in the private chapel of Wood Norton, the county home of the Duke of Orleans. Arrangements have been made for entertaining 400 guests four days at a cost of $150,000. The bride's wedding gown is and veil cost $25,000 and the gifts are estimated to be worth $1,000,000.

PERSIAN OFFICIALS IN FEAR OF REDS

Teheran, Persia, Nov. 16.—A secret revolutionary society, the chief aim of which is to watch over the constitution and the existence of which was not suspected until recently, has been discovered here.

The principal means by which this society intends to preserve the constitution is the terror of the most unadulterated kind, and since its discovery the added worry drives many Persian officials to resign.

The name of this society is Fedavi, and everyone who is to be initiated into its membership must take a most solemn oath to dedicate his life to the work of the organization. He must give his will and provide for his wife and children before he joins the Fedavi, after joining he is to devote all his time and energy to the execution of the society's decrees.

KRUPP WORKS ARE FACING A CRISIS

Essen, Germany, Nov. 16.—Krupps have no work. The famous firm, which became fabulously rich in furnishing European countries with war material, finds itself face to face with the most serious crisis in its history.

The night shifts were abandoned some time ago. Now the workday has been shortened so as to reduce expenses, and the workingmen find themselves in a very precarious condition.

The humorous side of the affair was illustrated at a recent meeting of the Krupp workmen, where resolutions condemning Czar Hague peace conference as interfering with the welfare of the laboring people were passed and unanimously adopted.

SANTOS-DUMONT'S AEROPLANE FLIES

Paris, Nov. 16.—Santos-Dumont to-day made a preliminary trial of his new aeroplane, called the Butterfly, in a field at Bagatelle. The machine easily accomplished a flight of three hundred metres at a height of thirty feet above the ground. It gave the impression of the soaring of a bird. Santos-Dumont to-morrow will attempt to win the Grand Archdeacon prize of $10,000 by completing a circular kilometre in the air.

BITTERLY ACCUSES YANKEE CHRISTIANS

London, Nov. 16.—The Rev. W. J. Dawson, who gave up the pulpit of the Highbury Quadrant Church, one of the largest Congregational houses of worship in London a few years ago to lecture in the United States, is about to publish a book which will probably stir Americans up to the fighting point.

Dr. Dawson openly accuses the Christian population of the United States and especially New York City of "immorality, hypocrisy and insincerity."

BOYCOTT LEGISLATURE.

Dresden, Saxony, Nov. 16.—A novel strike came to an end this week. All the newspapermen of the city were boycotting the sittings of the Saxon House of Representatives because one of the representatives declared that they spread nonsense. The boycott continued until the offending member offered an apology.

SEND NOTE OF PROTEST.

Athens, Greece, Nov. 16.—The continuous attacks by bands of Bulgarian bandits upon the peaceful population on the Greek frontier has led the government to address a note of protest to the powers, in which terrible outrages committed by these outlaws are cited.

DENMARK FACES WAR.

Copenhagen, Nov. 16.—A general cry for strengthening Denmark's defenses has been raised throughout the kingdom. It is pointed out that Sweden's hostility may eventually lead to a war between the two countries, in which event Denmark will find herself utterly unable to cope with an invading force. Sweden's warlike preparations in strengthening the defenses on the Norwegian frontier, have also led the latter country to increase the army. Talk of a war, with Sweden on one side and Denmark and Norway on the other, is rampant, although the Swedish cabinet is doing all in its power to allay what is termed needless fears.
